attorneys. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1889. c. '88, '89, 4-271 p. D. cl., $1.

The story is told in an incidental way by Gerald Fountain, with "Gauge and Swallow." The time is antecedent to and during the Rebellion; the cases that come under the supervision of a New York law firm make an excellent theme. The scene is not confined strictly to Gotham, it changes frequently to the South; neither is the plot a connected one, each incident supplies an individual mystery and interest; even though the chain of events connect but rarely the effect is very complete and harmonious. By the author of "A fool's errand," "Bricks without straw," etc. Mr. Tourgée claims that any lawyer will see the probabilities in his narrative, and that the positive truth of many could be established by investigation.

Trowbridge, J. T. The adventures of David Vane and David Crane. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1880.] C. 4-204 p. il. D. cl., $1.

A story of boy-life on a New England farm. The author shows his sympathy with boys, and his genuine liking for country scenes. While there are many meny incidents, there are some tearful scenes too. The characters are full of individuality. acters are full of individuality.

800. N. Y., C: SCIIDNET'S SONS, 1800. C. 12+290 p. D. Cl., $1.50.

"The poetry of Tennyson," in all its power and beauty, is analyzed and described in the following essar: The first flight; The palace of art; Miltor and Tempson; Two splendid failures; The idyls of the king; The historic trilogy; The Bible in Tennyson. An appending gives a brief record of such facts and dates as may be helpful in studying the work of the poet, and a bibliography more complete than any that has yet been published; there is also a list of Biblical quotations and allusions found in the works of Tennyson.

701 p. O. cl., $2.

In 1883, the same compiler published "A dictionary of quotations from the poets." This work is a companion volume. The compiler has allowed herself a wide range in collecting these prose quotations. Besides the standard writers and classics, writers almost unknown to "literature" have been drawn upon, because some one of their utterances in addresses or newspaper articles have seemed sufficiently graceful or original to justify their preservation. Altogether there have been brought together more than six thousand extracts, wise thoughts of famous men, shrewd sayings, apothegms, epigrams, utterances in "lyric prose," the precious fruit of intellect and genius. Five hundred and fifty-three authors and translators are represented. Their sayings are grouped under $4\tau$ heads and there are $123\text{8}$ cross-references. Although the work is alphabetical under topics, there is a topical index, an analytical index, a chronological table, and a list of authors and translators.

334 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 42.) cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.
While on the cars, at the beginning of their wedding journey, Mary Fenwick's husband inadvertently gives her a letter from his sister, congratulating him upon having married an heiress instead of a former Mary, who was poor. Mrs. Fenwick is incensed and wishes to leave him and live with her sister. He tells her this is impossible, she must play her part before others, but shall never be troubled by him except in unavoidable ways. The novel introduces many characters to bring about the awakening of Mary Fenwick. The scene is laid in a lovely part of England, among ancestral halls. Said to be the author's first work.

Wiggin, Kate Douglas. A summer in a cañon: a California story. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin a California story. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1889. c. 5+272 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The scene is a camping-ground in the Cafion Los Flores in Southern California. The people in the tents are the dear old host, the sweet-faced mother, the camp poetess, a sweet, but saucy lass, a small scamp of six years, the useful member, the prince of mischief, a Harvard boy, a heathen Chinee, a Mexican man-of-all-work, and a "nutbrown Mayde." With these actors Mrs. Wiggin presents a record of some happy days spent away from toil and trouble. The conversations are bright, and tears and smiles alternate rapidly in her warm, tender story of real people of all ages, thrown together for a vacation.

Wilson, Woodrow. The state: elements of historical and practical politics; a sketch of institutional history and administration. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1889. c. 36+686 p. D. cl., $2.

The scope and plan of this work are self-evident. In preparing it the author labored under the disadvantages of having had no predecessors, no text-book of like purpose having hitherto been attempted. Hence the work is large, there being no other books the student could refer to for additional information. The volume has therefore been printed in two sizes of type: minor details are put into small print, and may be omitted without breaking the continuity of the text. The present interest in comparative politics should make the book acceptable to teacher.

Mr. Andrew Lang is the author of this recent skit on the book trade:

"A Buyer of Books" (a rare being), asks:
"What do booksellers keep in stock?" "Not books," he says; "they never have anything but the works of ——;" here he names a contemporary novelist. He adds that the following dialogue is stereotyped:

Buyer of books—"Have you the 'Pilgrim's Progress,' 'Gulliver's Travels,' 'The Arabian Nights,' 'Macaulay's Essays,' 'The Idyls of the King'?"

Seller—" No; we have not these in stock, but we can get them for you."

Buyer of books slams the door and exit.

All matter, whether for the reading matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

WITH the meeting of Congress the copyright question comes to the front again, and vigorous efforts will be made by the Copyright Leagues and other interests to push the revised bill forward to a successful vote. The bill, as introduced by Senator Platt in the Senate and Colonel Breckenridge in the House, is practically the Chace bill of last session with some verbal modifications (chiefly made by Mr. Thorvald Solberg, late of the Library of Congress) to bring it into more exact conformity with the existing copyright law, or to cover points within the intent of the bill, but not fully provided for in the original draft. One or two of the latter class were suggested by the representative of the Typographical Union. The bill goes to Congress with the assent and positive support of the American (Authors') Copyright League, the American Publishers' Copyright League, the Typothetæ, or master printers' association, and the Typographical Unions, as well as of other organizations and interests. This should give it a better chance than any copyright bill has ever had, and those familiar with the course of legislation in Washington express their belief that it is almost sure to pass both Houses during the present session.

Two more assignments follow the Belford, Clarke & Co. failure, one of them of much the same sort. The firm of Pollard & Moss, which started in business ten years ago, has been chiefly reprinters of cheap editions of standards and illustrated books (as Doré), and it will be remembered that early in their career they had a controversy with Messrs. G. P. Putnam's Sons as to the reprinting of Washington Irving's books, some of which were just then running out of copyright. Their business has been chiefly a cheap reprinting business, and their failure basnot been unexpected. They have been so far outside the lines of the "regular" trade that we have found it almost impossible to get bibliographical record of their books each year, despite every effort on our part to do so. The assignment of S. E. Cassino, in Boston, will command a good deal of sympathy from the trade, since be was a young and pushing publisher of high character, who did not depend upon other people's ideas, but was abundantly fertile in ideas of his own, and made books of very high artistic and mechanical quality. It is understood that his invention outran his capital, and that his difficulties, which have been more or less known for a year past, came from over-enterprise. Mr. Cassino, we understand, leaves the book trade. at least for the present, to take a position of importance in the West, and his loss will be a real one. Very possibly if it had not been for the competition on the less honorable side of the trade, which so narrows the sphere of bookselling in the higher sense. Mr. Cassino might have built up successfully the business which he had planned.

A curious lawsuit comes to an end in the decision of the Court of Appeals in the case of Lovell versus Houghton. This was in the nature of a counter move to that of Houghton, Mifflin & Co., against the John W. Lovell Co., for infringement of the copyright in Longfellow's prose It will be recalled that the original copyright in "Hyperion" and "Outre Mer" had expired, and that these works were republished in Lovell's Library, it was claimed from the original editions, and without incorporation of the author's latest modifications, which were still under copyright protection. Messrs. Houghton claimed that in one of these cases the book had been reprinted from a later edition, and but imperfectly corrected by comparison with the copy in the Harvard College Library, and advertised that the Lovell Co. were infringing upon the Longfellow copyright. The Lovell Co. thereupon brought suit against Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. for slander and libel, to the injury of their business. The case has been carried by the plaintiffs to the highest court, which has finally decided that the plaintiffs have no case and that the defendants are entitled to costs. The suit is one of the most curious in the history of publishing, and the result will probably make reprinting publishers more careful in the use of material on which there is still any question of copyright. The decision seems, therefore, to be a wholesome

THERE is no foundation for the report circulated in the daily press to the effect that the sale of the Barlow property, at Madison Ave. and 23d St., and of the residence of W. H. Appleton, Esq., to the representative of the Mutual Insurance Co., was with the view of erecting a publishing building for a book trade syndicate or other book interests.

COUNT DE KÉRATRY'S MISSION IN BEHALF OF INTERNATIONAL COPVRIGHT

A NUMBER of gentlemen connected with the Copyright Leagues, and others interested in international copyright give a breakfast at Del-monico's this Saturday, in welcome of Count de Kératry, the representative of the French Government and of French literary organizations, who is now in this country in the interests of a copyright treaty between the United States and France.

The Herald, in giving an account of the mission, says:

"When the Count de Kératry came to the United States last spring, as the special representative of the French Government and the various literary, artistic, and musical societies of France, to ascertain the possibilities of negotiating an international copyright treaty with France, in an interview which the Count de Kératry with M. Roustan, the French Minister, had at that time with Mr. Blaine, the Secretary, with the statesmanship and breadth of views which in measures of national import he has always displayed, expressed himself as eminently favorable to the mission of the Count, using the emphatic words: 'This piracy must be stopped.'

" Encouraged by his reception at the State Department, and confident that the sense of justice and honor of the American people would prevail against the petty and selfish interests fostered by the wholesale pillage of foreign authors, the Count de Kératry returned to France and prepared the draft of a treaty satisfactory to the French Government and literary societies of France, and based upon the Convention of Berne and the treaty prepared by Mr. Evarts and submitted by him in 1880 to the English Govern-

"With this treaty the Count de Kératry returned to the United States, retaining as special counsel Mr. W. Morton Grinnell, of the firm of Tracy, McFarland, Boardman & Platt, and for some years counsel to the United States Legation in Paris. The treaty was submitted to the Secretary of State by M. Roustan, and several interviews were held for the purpose of discussing its provisions. In a matter of such importance it was thought advisable by the State Department to have the opinion of the American Copyright League.

"The Count de Kératry and Mr. Grinnell therefore returned to New York, and a meeting of the General Council was called for Saturday November 23, at which resolutions were passed unanimously complimentary to the Count de l

Kératry. And in addition those present expressed their heartlest sympathy with the object of M. de Kératry's mission, only regretting that the constitution of the League precluded their discussing any treaty or measure other than the bill for international copyright which is to be offered at the opening of Congress."

This last statement involves a misapprehension. The meeting was not one of the Council of the American Copyright League, but of the Conference Committee of representatives of the several organizations favoring the Chace bill. The resolution expressed sympathy with efforts in behalf of international copyright, with the statement that the Conference was at present precluded from taking part in any movement which might seem prejudicial to the success of the pending measure.

The Count presented the draft of the proposed treaty, and added that France would be willing to concede a manufacturing clause on translations of French books. He is said to estimate the loss suffered by French authors, dramatists, artists, composers, etc., from the absence of copyright with the United States at quite 60,000,000 fr. ($12.000,000) a year. This is probably, however.

GOLDWIN SMITH ON CANADIAN COPY-RIGHT.

From the Bystander (Toronto).

By the copyright legislation of last session at Ottawa, and the renewed opposition of English publishers to Canadian enactments on the subject, fresh interest has been awakened in vexed question. The difficulty in dealing with the matter has hitherto arisen from this fact, that the English book trade have continually made copyright legislation in the colonies a publisher's rather than an author's question. To add to the complications, the music publishers have, it seems, joined the book publishers, and their combined interests have of late strengthened the case against the Canadian book trade and the aim of the latter to legislate at once in their own interests and in those of the author. It could hardly be helped, perhaps, that the question, as it affects British interests, should become a publisher's one, and that for two reasons. First, because the publisher, in the case of young authors and those who have not made a reputation, generally assumes the greater part of the risk involved in publication, and thereby controls, if he does not wholly acquire, copyright. Secondly, because the authors (and particularly the novelists) have not been able as yet to break down the artificial library system, which by maintaining the highpriced three-volume issues and editions not for popular use but for the privileged classes, plays into the hands of the publishers, and makes the author a mere cipher in regard to the trade arrangements for bringing out and handling his book. Helpless in regard to his home market. the author is not any better informed about, or more in a position to conduct negotiations with, the foreign market. Hence the difficulty in getting him to see not only the reasonableness but the gain to his pocket, in meeting the views of the Canadian publisher, whom he somehow treats as an accomplice of the American literary pirate, nefariously robbing him of his due, rather than as a fellow-subject who would gladly protect the interest of the British author if the British author would put him in a position to do so. What the Canadian publisher seeks reasonably and justly to do, the author, if he will dismiss prejudice from his mind, and recognize the exceptional circumstances of the Canadian position, will find embodied in the Ottawa Copyright Act of last session, as well as in the Act of 1872, which, at the instance of the English book trade, was vetoed by the Imperial Government. The principle on which both of these acts were based may be briefly stated. Their first aim was to protect the native market from the inroads of unauthorized American reprints, which by a British Order in Council in 1847 were on certain conditions privileged to enter Canada. Their second and chief aim was to secure the British author's interest by legalizing native reprints, paying a royalty to the copyright owner on the edition authorized to be printed, while their manufacture in the country would give employment to the various industries connected with publishing. In this effort of Canadian legislation to solve a knotty problem, it is not of course claimed that the highest regard is paid either to vested interests or even to abstract right. The compulsory clauses of the Acts take perhaps too much liberty with the author's or copyright owner's property for that to be maintained. But this was demanded by the peculiarities of the situation, and involves no detriment to the English author. It was, in truth, the only way of relieving Canada from being dependent for its intellectual sustenance on the costly and almost prohibitory issues of the English market on the one hand, or, in the absence of an international copyright, on the often worthless issues of the piratical presses of the United States on the other. What the Acts United States on the other. sought to secure was some provision for the author, which at present is practically lost to him, and to substitute a desirable and operative law for an undesirable and defective one, which the author's ignorance or indifference has too long allowed to remain on the statute-book. other words, by their common-sense proposals, the author would receive a royalty, secured to him by the government, on all editions of his work sold in Canada, as well as on such editions as might also be disposed of in the United States, as against the precarious and, at the best, inconsiderable sums collected at the customs ports on stray copies of pirated American editions which a listless scrutiny detected entering the country. The proposals have this also to recommend them: that while the Canadian reprint would give employment to the native industries, the author would receive as royalty a sum en bloc on the edition authorized to be printed, with the practical benefits of acquiring on this continent a market which he does not now possess, and which, while being supplementary to the English one, would not interfere with it. Nor by either of the acts are the interests of the English publisher, whether he is the owner of the copyright or not, invaded or in any way disregarded. The act of last session provides that at the expiry of a month after publication of the work in England, if the copyright owner has not previously arranged for an edition, a license may issue from the government to the Canadian publisher who applies for permission to reprint, and gives a bond for the amount of the author's royalty. But the English publisher may forestall that reprint. not only within the month of grace, but prior to the issue of the book in England he may negotiate with his own agent in Canada and place on the market an edition which, if he likes, he can print from his English plates forwarded here for the purpose. Thus are even the British publisher's interests protected, though to secure them he must of course comply with the law, or allow the native publisher to step in and by government license secure the market against the foreign reprint. In this surely there is no injustice; nor is either author or publisher at any serious detriment. The act neither contemplates nor connives at any sharp practice or questionable advantage; it merely recognizes the exceptional circumstances of the Canadian market and seeks to legislate accordingly. Like reciprocity with the United States, it takes note of the economical situation, and endeavors, not from the manufacturers' point of view merely, but from that, in conjunction with the interests of the people, to meet as best it may the difficulty. English publishers and authors must recollect that Canada is on the American continent; and to treat it as an outlying possession of England, without reference to its connection with the United States, is to perpetuate the evil which Canadian copyright legislation has again attempted to remove. interfere with this legislation would not extend the British book market. It would extend that of the American reprinter, who alone would reap the benefit, while Canadian publishing industries would stagnate.

PRESIDENT HARRISON ON INTERNA-TIONAL COPYRIGHT.

PRESIDENT HARRISON, in his first message to Congress, alludes to the subject of international copyright in the following paragraph: "The subject of an international copyright has been frequently commended to the attention of Congress by my predecessors. The enactment of such a law would be eminently wise and just."

QUARITCH'S EXHIBIT OF VALUABLE BOOKS.

BERNARD QUARITCH, the well-known London bibliopole, intends in January next to hold an exhibition in New York, Boston, Chicago, and Philadelphia, of a selection of the rarest and costlest of the treasures which he has been almost a lifetime in collecting. Scribner & Welford are preparing a descriptive list of these treasures concerning which we take the following details from Mr. Quaritch's circular announcement:

"The first imperial jewel in our exhibition is a manuscript in golden letters upon purple vellum, written at a period just half-way between the birth of Christ and the discovery of America. Another is the Psalter of Mendham Priory, rich with miniatures, displaying the character of English pictorial art in the days of Thomas à Becket. More beautiful, if less interesting, are the illuminated manuscripts of later ages; French work from the time of Duquesclin to Bayard, Burgundian and Flemish of the fifteenth century, Italian of the early sixteenth. Amongst these are the Clermont-Tonnerre French Bible of 1350, with grisaille illustrations, the Heures à la Rose of 1400, with its superb coloring and graceful borders, the magnificent Missal of the Cardinal de Castelnau of 1500, and the Mount Olivet Psalter. written near Siena about the same time. Among the monuments of typography the first place is easily taken by the Psalter of 1450, the grandest work ever printed and the costliest book in the world. It exhibits the first and the most triumphant effort of color-printing that has yet been seen. The Psalter is followed by Fust's Cicero. also upon vellum, and by a number of books similarly printed on vellum by Jenson, Vindelin de Spira, and Miscomini (at Venice and Florence). remarkable for the wondrous splendor of the illumination with which they are decorated like manuscripts. Here also is the first book that was printed in Italy, and four Caxtons (including the famous Game of Chesse, and another of the books produced by him at Bruges before he carried his art to England. Amongst the illustrated books are the famous Poliphilo of 1400 and the first Tewrdank of 1517. English literature is represented by rare editions of the great writers (and a Wickliffe Manuscript) from Chaucer to Burns, including folio and quarto Shakespeares. There are also Americana in plenty, including the rarer New England literature of the seventeenth century, and the manuscript Virginia collections of John Smyth, of Nibley (1610-'35).

THE OLD BOOK-CLERK AND THE NEW.

I CANNOT quite tell how it came about, but I was thinking the other night of some of the oldtime booksellers and book-clerks, and of the days when the selling of books was generally looked upon in a somewhat different light than now. Then the head of the house might often be seen behind the counter; seemingly as much interested in selling as he had previously been in publishing a book.

In those days all the bookstores were a kind of training-school for clerks. The young men were expected to have a certain degree of knowledge as to the books they offered for sale. The bookstore was also a resort for book-lovers and bookbuyers—and the clerks picked up from these hints and suggestions concerning books new and old. True, there were not so many books then as now, but as the trade grew and stores multiplied, the number of competent salesmen also increased. And among the older of this school of intelligent workers who does not recall Welford and Kernot-types of their class? With what eyes they looked upon a good book !-- and to examine it, just as a jeweller does a gem of the first water. And what a friend every publisher had in such distributers of his publications. There are some such booksellers left us, but alas! they are altogether too few for the interests not only of their own particular houses, but for the publishers at large.

The "old order changes," and year by year we are bringing in the new to replace the old. "We handle books"—says the head of a house that claims, in connection with a great bazaar, to "sell more books than any other retail house between the oceans "-" we handle books just as we handle any other merchandise." And here we meet the cause and effect of the change of which I have spoken. The new book-clerk is a saleswoman, or a dry-goods clerk changed from counter to counter to meet the exigencies of the (trade) hour. Are the best publishers oblivious to the fact that the more of such counters there are the poorer the service for them? for while the manager is often one who has been well trained himself as a bookseller, his subordinates have had no such training, and it is upon this "un-skilled labor" that the publishers of the best literature of the country are coming more and more to depend as distributing agents.

Not long since I went into one of these bazaars. It is a wonderful concern. Working my way through the "madding crowd." I came to the Book Department. My old friend the manager (he is a good fellow, who knows a book that is a book) was absent. So I had leisure to look over the "department." Many of the new books were there (new books with an advertised price make good "leaders" when "broken") but there was also a much larger display of books. that are not books. Behind the counter there was a goodly number of young women, of quiet They manner, ready to serve the customer. were doing well and faithfully as far as they knew, but it was literally a zeal without knowledge. In their eyes the "Wiking Age," was not as nice a book, or as cheap, as Dickenesis works in ten volumes at the same price; while the Marble Faunes's was beautifully bound! These girls were anxious to sell, but they knew not how, and how could they be expected to know? How long was it since they had sold ribbons or tapes or some other of the ten thousand things at other counters in the great building.

I think I saw also that which is worth remembering just now: and it is that the best books, in the hands of a salesman or saleswoman ignorant of their quality, are apt to suffer when the buyer does not know just what he wants. The girl has no ability to select, while the temptation of the clerk in such circumstance, under the rules of the house, is to sell the poorer book in all cases if it pays a little more profit.

And this reminds me of a story in point. A lady gave her little girl a coin, and told her to-go and buy a book. The child went to a go and buy a book. bazaar where there was a book counter. In due time she returned, but with a book which the mother saw was not suitable to her years. child admitted that 'she had not looked into the book, and went on to say that when she told the girl that she wanted to buy a book, but did not know what she wanted, she was asked whether she wanted a blue or a red one. The child answered that she did not know. And then the young woman went on to say that she thought that a blue book was the prettiest of all, and the child, of course, took the blue one, without so much as looking within the covers. The book was Proverbial Philosophy!

A good story and with a moral. The drygoods bookstore is increasing. The old-time bookstore is losing ground. The old-time bookclerk finds less and less encouragement; the newtime book-clerk is in demand, and changes from the thread and needle counter to the book counter at Christmas-time. Every year the sale of "the standards" increases; every year to make an ade-quate and continuous sale of a new book becomes harder. Instead of the enlarging and spreading bookstore, as a centre for the distribution of books by intelligent clerks, there is springing up all over the country what may be termed the Literary Slot, into which one drops his nickel, or his coin, and "a book" falls out. What is to be the outcome of it all, alike to publisher and the regular bookseller?

COMMUNICATIONS.

ON THE "ETHICS OF COMPROMISE," AND "TRADE COURTESY."

NEW YORK, NOV. 18, 1889.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly:

SIR: You are entitled to the thanks of every honest member of the book trade, and of every honest man, for your recent editorial on "The Ethics of Compromise" and your other articles on the same subject.

If there is any business in this country devoted to clean things that is now on a more unclean basis than the book business, I don't know what it is. Of the men who have brought it to this condition, most have failed and got upon their feet again, generally to fail again.

And why should not this state of affairs characterize a business whose commodities largely consist of goods taken without payment to those who made them? Is not such a business a standing invitation to characteriess and reckless men?

The excuse of a recent bankrupt pirate that he "had to turn pirate" to keep himself afloat, if it means anything, means that he was less able than many other men to keep himself afloat without it. Nothing is more unjust than the assertion, not infrequently made, that the pub-lishers of standing who observed and still ob-serve "trade courtesy," frowned on all new aspirants to their numbers. It has not been a generation since the present writer was such an aspirant, and he was welcomed not only with cordiality, but with helpfulness. The oldest and strongest houses in the trade adhered to "trade courtesy" strictly, and even generously, toward him; and the late Charles Scribner, of honored memory, once said to him: "Mr. ——, I often felt, when I was a young fellow in the trade, that I wished I could go to some experienced man for advice; and remembering that, I should be very glad, if you ever feel the same way, to have you come to me for any that you think I may be able to give." There are at least three houses now well known who grew up under that alleged prohibitory régime, who have never acted the jackal to game that the lions had brought down, and who have always paid a hundred cents on the dollar. Under the present shape of the law, there seems little prospect that such a record will again become, as it was once, generally characteristic of the trade.

FAIR PLAY.

A PLEA FOR SUITABLE BINDING FOR BOOKS FOR LIBRARIES.

SALEM PUBLIC LIBRARY, SALEM, MASS., NOV. 25, 1889.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly:

DEAR SIR: At the present time, when so many of the libraries are circulating books without covering them, I think it a great mistake that publishers insist on binding the whole edition of their books in white, or other very light and delicate bindings. For our benefit, I think a part of the copies should be bound in some less liable to be soiled color. I am most tempted to refuse to buy certain books because I know they will be utterly ruined, as to the exterior, after circulating three or four times. Can't the influence of your periodical be thrown in our favor? White is very pretty for a wedding or other present, but a book like Mr. Van Rensselaer's "Six Portraits" deserves a more durable binding.

GARDNER M. JONES.

OBITUARY NOTES.

MARTIN FARQUHAR TUPPER, the venerable author of "Proverbial Philosophy," died in London on November 20, at the age of seventy-nine. He was of an ancient Guernsey family, was born in London in 1810, and was educated at the old Charter-house, where Thackeray was one of his schoolfellows. Subsequently he spent three years at Christ Church, Oxford, where he formed a lifelong friendship with Mr. Gladstone. An impediment of speech prevented him from taking holv orders or from practising at the bar, and he therefore devoted himself to literature. His best-known work, "Proverbial Philosophy," appeals to the best impulses of the human heart. It is estimated that nearly a million copies of this book were sold, and its popularity was due far more to its philanthropic and optimistic tone than to its literary merit. Mr. Tupper paid two visits to America, the last one in 1887, when he was the guest of Rev. Dr. Talmage. He died was the guest of Rev. Dr. Talmage. was the guest of Rev. Dr. laimage. He dien comparatively a poor man. Among his other works are "Probabilities, an Aid to Faith" (1847), "Stephen Langton" (1858), "My Life as an Author" (1886), a drama entitled "Washington" (1876), etc. He also translated the poems of Alfred the Great into English verse. He was on terms of friendship with most of the literary men of his day.

ELIZABETH CLEMENTINE KINNEY was born in New York City, December 10, 1810. She was a sister of the late William E. Dodge and extensively connected with well-known men. She married Edmund B. Stedman, a merchant of Hartford, Conn., and was the mother of Edmund C. Stedman, the poet. She was early left a widow, and in 1841 married William B. Kinney, who in 1850 was appointed United States Minister to the Court of Vistor Emmanuel. In Italy Mrs. Kinney was closely associated with the Brownings, Trollopes, Tennysons, Hiram Powers, Mrs. Somerville, and many other persons of note. From her earliest years Mrs. Kinney wrote in verse and prose, and one of herdramas, "Bianca Capella," was published in 1873 by Hurd & Houghton. Mrs. Kinney was a woman of rare beauty and social charm, and the fine critical powers of her son are his by direct inheritance. Mrs. Kinney died at Summit, New Jersey, and was buried Saturday, November 23.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

CHARLOTTE M. YONGE is said to be writing her loist book.

PAUL DU CHAILLU is said to have in contemplation an elaborate biography of Gustavus Adolphus.

MISS RHODA BROUGHTON, after a silence of some years, has written a new novel, with the curious title of "Alas!"

COL. M. V. SHERIDAN, brother of the famous General, is engaged in revising the memoirs of General Phil. Sheridan.

MISS MARIE A. BROWN, of Chicago, the champion of Lief Erikson, has just been married, and is now to be known as Mrs. John B. Shipley.

FREDERICK WEDMORE has finished his little volume on "Balzac,' which is to be published in January, by Walter Scott, in the Great Writers series.

A "HISTORY OF UNITARIANISM" is in course of preparation by the Rev. A. A. Livermore, the President of the Meadville, Pa., Theological School.

WM. HENRY HURLBERT has written a new volume, entitled "France and Her Republic, a record of things seen and heard in the 'Centennial Year' 1889."

EGMONT HAKE has edited the diary kept by Gen. Gordon during the Tai-ping rebellion. It will be published shortly, illustrated with portraits, maps, and plans.

CAPTAIN ANDREW HAGGARD, the brother of Rider Haggard, is about to publish his first novel. It is called "Dodo and I," and is said to contain some vivid descriptions of stirring scenes in the last Abyssinian war.

R. D. BLACKMORE's recent appearance in court as complainant against a man who had stolen $25 worth of his pears, brings out the fact that the author of "Lorna Doone" is better known at his home in Teddington as a market gardener than as the author of some of the most charming of contemporary works of fiction.

IVAN PANIN, the Russian littérateur, was baptized in the Central Baptist Church of Chicago on November 17, after his renunciation of infidelity. All his life up to the time of his graduation from Harvard in 1884, Panin was an infidel. He went to Minneapolis a year ago to deliver a few lectures. Since becoming a Christian Panin has renounced lecturing on worldly topics and will henceforth stick to the pulpit.

ZOLA's new novel is to be called "La Bête Humaine." It is described as a grim sort of expansion of the Jekyll and Hyde idea. With relentless realism, latent animal instincts in man are studied and depicted. The work was suggested by a murder in a railway carriage, Zola has worked into the background of the book an exhaustive treatment of railroad life and railroad questions generally.

REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE has under way for the Historical Publishing Co., of Philadelphia, a "Life of Christ," on which he has been engaged for more than a year, and which he regards as his masterpiece. To collect material for it he started a couple of weeks ago for the Holy Land, going first direct to Rome. He will visit Athens, Alexandria, Cairo, the Pyramids, and other points previous to sailing for Joffa.

EMILE OLLIVIER, the ex-Minister of the French Empire, has in press his new work, "1789 and 1889." The volume treats of the Revolution, and the social political, and religious work of the movement of 1789, concluding with a programme of reforms to be effected in the political organization of latter-day France, and notably in the management of universal suffrage and the present Parliamentary system.

GEORGE A. SALA will publish before the new year, through the Messrs. Bentley, a selection of his reminiscences. Mr. Sala is now sixty-one years old. He was indebted for his start in literature to Charles Dickens. Thirty-five years ago he sent Dickens a roll of manuscript, saying he had been an engraver, and having recovered from a painful disease of the eyes, was anxious to do something in literature. Dickens accepted the manuscript, and published it in All the Year Round.

DOUGLAS SLADEN, the Australian poet, who has been making a tour of Canada from Halifax to the Pacific, is now in Victoria, B. C., collecting, information for a book which he intends writing on Canada. The volume will contain his personal impressions of the Dominion, statistics of her trade, her relations with the mother country and reciprocal benefits derived from the connection, besides the advantages offered by Canada as a trade route between England and the colonies of the Pacific.

GUSTAV FREYTAG'S "Der Kronprinz und die deutsche Kaiserkrone" was printed in full in the Belletristisches Journal of this city of November 14. It will be issued at once by George Bell & Sons, in an English translation, under the title of "The Crown Prince and the German Imperial Crown. A reply to this book, by Dr. Otto Arendt, will be published shortly by Walther & Assolant, of Berlin. Freytag is a Conservative, Dr. Arendt a Liberal, and it is expected that the latter's reply will make considerable sensation in the German political world.

S. LANGLEY, who was Thackeray's private secretary for a year or two, kept a diary, in which the record of daily events is said to be quite full. This diary is now to be sold. The Pall Mall Cazette, in mentioning this fact, says: "Notes of the great author's conversations and remarks have been jotted down day by day, and his opinions on all sorts and conditions of men and events are in the chronicle, and his personal peculiarities have also been noted. Besides the diary there is also a large quantity of manuscripts in Mr. Langley's hand, including his data and remembrances of his master that at one time he intended to publish as 'Recollections of Mr. William Makepeace Thackeray.'"

IOURNALISTIC NOTES.

WITH a bright and entertaining December number, the popular Magasine of American History completes its twenty-second volume.

THE No Name Magazine (American Press Co., Baltimore) offers prizes for the three best short stories. The competition is open only to paid subscribers to the magazine.

MISS KATE FIELD'S new paper, Washington, will be issued at the national capital towards the end of this month. It will be issued weekly, and will be devoted to art, science, literature, finance, society, music, and the drama.

JAS. G. BLAINE, Chauncey M. Depew, Andrew Carnegie, Lord Randolph Churchill, and John Wanamaker will tell the boys and girls of America, through the pages of Santa Claus next year, what they think made the United States great. They do so in the Story of Columbus series of that journal.

The very welcome announcement is made that Dr. Holmes will write a series of papers of reminiscence and characteristic reflection for The Atlantic Monthly next year. To indicate at once a certain likeness and unlikeness to the famous "Breakfast-Table" papers, he will call these "Over the Tea-Cups."

A NUMBER of gentlemen interested in the University of Pennsylvania have established a publishing company under the name of the University Press. Their purpose is to control the present publications of the University and to establish such new periodicals as the needs of the institution may suggest. At least four new magazines will be issued by the company soon after Ian. I.

The present Duke of Wellington has authorized the publication in The Century magazine for December of a series of letters written by his great ancestor to a young married lady, Mrs. Jones of Pantglas, afterwards Lady Levinge. These letters date from August, 1851, fo September 7, 1852, the week before the death of the Iron Duke, and are said to present him in a very attractive light. In the same issue also appears the first complete and fully illustrated paper on "The New Croton Aqueduct."

THE LEONARD SCOTT PUBLICATION Co. announces that it still publishes the American Naturalist in its serial order, "notwithstanding the announcement or statements of other parties." The American Naturalist is an illustrated monthly, devoted not only to natural history, but also to travel, and is "an instructive and entertaining guide to all the new discoveries regarding the earth's surface and the inhabitants thereof"

The Arena is the title of a new monthly magazine, published in Boston, which intends to devote itself to the serious discussion of serious public questions. The first issue, published in November, and the December number contained contributions from the Rev. M. J. Savage, W. H. H. Murray, Mary A. Livermore, Helen Campbell, O. B. Frothingham, N. P. Gilman, and others. For the January number articles by Col. Ingersoll, Henry George, and Dion Boucicault are promised.

THE American edition of Artistic Japan, published by the Artistic Japanese Agency, 220 Fifth Avenue, will hereafter be published simultaneously with the English, French, and German editions issued abroad. The edition printed for this country contains precisely the same engraved and colored plates as the European editions, which are printed in color by M. Gillot, of Paris, under M. S. Bing's personal direction. The series of plates issued with this journal will form a valuable collection on various subjects, desirable for amateurs, architects, decorators, and artists, as well as all industrial workers needing suggestions in design, color, motive, or form.

In addition to the usual array of unusual attractions the Christmas Wide Awake will be enlarged sixteen pages to admit Grant Allen's serial of adventure, "Wednesday the Tenth," a tale of the South Pacific. The same number opens serials by Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen and William O. Stoddard, the former a story of modern Norse boys, the latter an American farm story. Howard Pyle the artist contributes a "Lady-and-Tiger" sort of story called "Lambkin, Was Hea Hero or a Prig?" Postal-card votes are invited from all readers, and cash prizes are offered for the most telling hundred-word arguments on each side. Alexander Black, the conscientious literary and art critic of the Brooklyn Times, begins in the same issue a series of laughable and practical pictorial papers on amateur photography, which he entitles "Confessions of an Amateur Photographer."

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

S. A. MAXWELL & Co., 134 to 140 Wabash Ave., Chicago, have published a catalogue for the trade only, of the standard, miscellaneous, and juvenile books handled by them. It is a quarto of 80 pages, fully illustrated and neatly printed.

BUSINESS NOTES.

ADRIAN, MICH.—Charles Humphrey, publisher, bookseller, and stationer, has sold out his business and retires from the book trade. Mr. Humphrey succeeded Jerome D. Baker in 1862, and has earned for himself the respect and friendship of the trade in the East as well as that of the citizens of Adrian. By his retirement from the book trade we lose a valued friend. At the time of going to press we were unable to learn the name of his successor.

ATLANTA, GA.—S. P. Richards & Son, booksellers and stationers, are now comfortably settled in their new store at 36 Whitehall Street. Their trade had outgrown the old quarters they had so long occupied, and they were compelled to seek larger accommodations in order to gain facilities for keeping pace with the demands made upon them.

Boston, Mass.—S. E. Cassino, of 192 Summer Street, has made an assignment to his father-in-law, Jacob Osborne, of Peabody, Mass. It is stated that the assignment was made in order to close up the business, and the prospects are that creditors will be paid in full. Mr. Cassino has for some time been contemplating retiring from the publishing businesss to take a responsible position in a mining company in the South. The arrangements are now consummated, and it is likely that Mr. Cassino has resorted to an assignment to rid himself of his business. Owing to Mr. Cassino's absence from the city it is impossible to get definite information. He recently sold the sixteenmo edition of his Dickens works to the Aldine Book Publishing Co.

BOSTON, Mass.—Rice Kendall & Co., whole-sale paper dealers, have dissolved partnership, J. Willard Rice retiring. The business will be continued in all its departments by "The Rice Kendall Company," a corporation duly organized under the laws of Massachusetts, Alexander H. Rice, President; Chas. S. Kendall, Vice-President; Henry D. Rope, Treasurer.

CONCORD, N. H.—Hunt & Wilson, booksellers, have dissolved partnership.

DALLAS, TEX.—T. M. Jones & Co., booksellers and stationers, are advertised to sell out.

DAVENPORT, GA.—John Berwald, bookseller and stationer, is advertising to close out his business.

DAWSON, GA.—C. L. Mize, bookseller, has lost his stock by fire.

DAYTON, O.—R. A. Cunningham has bought the book and stationery business of W. W. Kile.

FLINT, MICH.—M. E. Carlton & Brother, booksellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership.

HUTCHINSON, KAN.—George W. Woodard, of the firm of George W. Woodard & Son, booksellers and stationers, is dead.

KEOKUK, Ia.—The firm of Clark & Johnson, booksellers and stationers, has been incorporated as the Clark Johnson Company.

MADISON, IND.—F. P. Vail, bookseller and stationer, has sold out.

NEW YORK CITY.—W. J. Weedon will remove about December 1 to 27 Centre St., where he will have larger quarters, having secured the entire building. He will be pleased to meet his friends when they are in the city. It is but a few doors from his old stand, 25 Chambers Street. He intends making his new store known as the "Big Bridge Bargain Bookstore."

NEW YORK CITY.—A stock company, under the title of the Welch-Fracker Company, has been formed to continue the book-publishing business of Willard Fracker & Co., at 18 West Fourth Street, New York. The officers of the company are Arthur E. Welch, President, Willard Fracker, Vice-President, and Charles Edward Barnes, Secretary and Treasurer. Mr. Arthur E. Welch has for over twenty years been known to the trade as the representative of Cassell & Co., W. W. Harding, and Sheldon & Co. He is a thoroughly posted book-man, and will no doubt in that respect be the backbone of the new firm. The firm which was succeeded by this one has already made a good reputation for itself in publishing tastefully gotten up books. The Welch-Fracker Co. has our best wishes.

NEW YORK CITY.—Not unexpectedly comes the announcement that Pollard & Moss, of 37 Barclay Street, have made an assignment. The firm is composed of Martha B. Pollard, of Riverdale, N. Y., and Charles Moss, of 253 W. 125th Street. Mrs. Pollard's interests were represented by her husband, who in the fall of 1879 left D. & J. Sadiler, with whom he had been associated for some years, to establish with Mr. Moss the subscription-book business that bears their name. Early in their career they began the publication of a number of Irving's works on which the copyright had run out, and issued them under the general title of "Irving's Works," which led to a lawsuit. As all of their books were sold on the subscription plan the trade generally did not become intimately acquainted with this firm. No statement has as yet been published, and the information obtained concerning the state of their affairs is very scant. The assignee thinks the liabilities will amount to about $100,000. Preferences were given to the amount of $14.485.86 on notes and money loaned, as follows: Lawrence Frazier & Co., $3523.98; Worthington Company, $913.50; National Park Bank, $4814.52; George A. Leavitt & Co., $253; James Grange, $1562.30; Excelsior Press Rooms and Publishing Co., $350; John Ward, $126.75; F. J. Pfister & Co., $1072.85; La America Publishing Co., $662.88; Alexander A. Clark, $500; Theodore Moss, $356.08; H. S. Almy & Co., $150; and Perez Trina & Co., $200. Among the other creditors are said to be Buckley, Dunton & Co., $15,000; Dyaton Paper Co., $30,000, and Hurst & Co., $6000.

OMAHA, NEB.—The book and stationery business of H. M. & S. W. Jones has been sold to the Boston Store.

PINCKNEY, MICH. — F. A. Sigler's stock of has been burned out.

S. IGNACE, MICH.—McAdams Brothers, book-sellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership.

SIOUX FALLS, DAK.—Clark & Farren, booksellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership.

SIGOURNEY, IOWA.—J. E. Langworthy, book-seller, has gone out of business.

VROVO, UTAH.—The firm of D. P. Felt & Co., booksellers and stationers, has been changed to Felt, Olsen & Co.

WILMINGTON, O.—C. A. Rannells, bookseller, has sold out.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

WALTER SCOTT'S diary may be expected early next year.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. have just ready "The Life of Harriet Beecher Stowe," by her son, Rev. Charles E. Stowe. The work is sold only by subscription.

HARPER & BROS. have issued an attractive pamphlet describing "The Making of a Great Magazine." This inquiry into the past and the future of Harper's Magazine forms an interesting story.

WORTHINGTON & Co. have just ready "Magdalen's Fortunes," by Heimburg, translated by Mrs. J. W. Davis. The book contains beautiful descriptions, is full of incident, and is a clean, bright story.

W. H. MALLOCK's new book," In an Enchanted Island," is said to be a book on Cyprus, full of interesting details and picturesque description mingled with some of that political reflection in a purely Tory vein which is characteristic of the author.

VICTOR GORGIAS, of Gersthof, near Vienna, Austria, has published a guide to chess-players, entitled 'The Amateur Chess-Player's Recreation Guide," illustrated with 573 diagrams of the author's own invention. The text is in English. Brentano's will supply the trade.

ROBERTS BROTHERS have just ready "In the Garden of Dreams. Lyrics and Sonnets," by Louise Chandler Moulton, illustrated by H. Winthrop Pierce, and uniquely bound in white and green cloth; also, a new edition of "Miss Alcott's Life, Letters, and Journals," neatly bound in cloth, with a new cover design.

THE "Addresses on the Civil Sabbath," which Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, of New York City, author of "The Sabbath for Man," has been delivering in all parts of the land as Field Secretary of the American Sabbath Union, are soon to be published under the above title by the author in a 25-cent pamphlet, which will also contain in its appendix the present Sunday laws of all the States, accompanied by comparative and critical notes and other valuable tables.

LONGMANS, GREEN & Co. will publish at once a new "Guide-Book to Florida," by Chas. Ledyard Norton. The scheme of the volume is similar to that of the well-known Baedeker guides, adapted to requirements of travellers in such a country as Florida. Separate maps of the counties, with post-roads and the new railway systems, are a noteworthy feature of the book. This guide-book is a revival on a new and more comprehensive plan of "The Florida Annual" originally published, and most favorably received by the public. in 1885.

FLEMING H. REVELL, Chicago and New York, has just published "Ecce Venit" (Behold He Cometh), by the Rev. A. J. Gordon, D.D., author of "In Christ," which has reached a seventh edition; also, "The Bible Picture Wall Roll," a collection of attractive pictures of Biblical incidents, with large-type descriptive texts in thirty-one leaves, suspended from a rod. Mr. Revell will publish soon "Alone with the Word," devotional notes on the whole of the New Testament in the form of short studies, by G. Stringer Rowe, Principal of Headley College, Leeds.

"LORNA DOONE" is one of the novels most called for in all public libraries, and at the suggestion of the Cleveland Public Library, which keeps fifteen copies of the book in regular circulation, the Burrows Brothers Co., of Cleveland, have offered to furnish to libraries which request it, copies of the admirable map of the Doone country, included in their dition de luxe, for pasting in the ordinary copies on the shelves. This does a service to the library community, while unobjectionably advertising the finer edition of the story, and librarians will do well to avail themselves of this offer.

F. GUTEKUNST, 712 Arch St., Philadelphia, has issued what may be considered the best and most satisfactory portrait of Mr. James Russell Lowell that has been made of him in his later years. It is a half life size panel (14 x 17 inches) and reproduces not only the expression of the poet's kindly eyes, but even the shading of his hair and beard. It was taken last February, when Mr. Lowell was on a visit to Philadelphia. Mr. Gutekunst is to be congratulated upon this success of his art.

We confidently recommend this to those who desire an adequate memorial of the poet and scholar Lowell.

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT Co. will shortly issue anonymously an important work, entitled "Justice and Jurisprudence," 'an inquiry concensing the Constitutional limitations of the Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Amendments." An appendix contains a full statement of all legislation, National and State, and a succinct digest, with table of every case, Federal and State, touching remotely or proximately the race question or civil rights. They also announce "The Maid of Orleans, and the Great War of the English in France," by W. H. Davenport Adams. The volume will be illustrated.

Gebbie & Co. have just imported an edition of "The Mirror of the World," by Octave Uzanne, the latest of that author's series of charming volumes, which included "The Fan" and "Sunshade." It is illustrated in the delightful manner that only such artists as Paul Avrill are masters of. They have recently published a very useful little volume on Shakespeare, entitled "Compendium and Concordance of Shakespeare's Works." It is a handy volume, full of useful information for all readers of Shakespeare, containing an historical introduction and summary of each play, a good concordance, full list of characters, etc., and is illustrated with numerous engravings by Howard.

FLEXNER & STAADEKER, the enterprising Louisville booksellers, instituted an exhibit last month for which they deserve especial credit and praise. To furnish an opportunity to those who are already well versed in book-lore, to foster the taste in those who know nothing of its delights, and to give the public generally the privilege of examining a class of books that is rarely displayed publicly, this young firm of booksellers succeeded in inducing the possessors of literary treasures in the West as well as from the East to contribute some of the most important of them to their exhibition. It was a great card for the house undertaking it, but likewise a great opportunity for the book-lovers in Louisville.

Announcement is made in European journals that the seventh volume of the Comte de Paris' "History of the American Civil War" is about to be published. This material, together with all or the greater part of the matter which will constitute the eighth volume of the French edition, is included in the fourth volume of the American edition, published in the spring of 1888 by Messrs. Porter & Coates. Owing to the difficulties in France at the time the seventh volume was ready for the printer, Calman Levy, the French publisher, decided to postpone its issue. Porter & Coates having advance sheets of the work as far as then written, published the material as the fourth volume of their edition.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & Co. were among the sufferers at the fire in Boston on Thanksgiving day. Their building at 65 Kingston St. was in the immediate neighborhood where the fire started, and was razed to the ground. Their loss as nearly as can be estimated amounts to upwards of $50,000, which is covered by insurance. Much of the sheet stock of their own publications was saved, having been stored in a warehouse quite a distance from the fire. Messrs. Crowell have engaged new quarters and ordered new machinery, so that they may resume business with as little loss of time as possible, and with increased facilities. In the meantime they have made all necessary arrangements to provide for their customers, and temporarily their offices will be at 151 Sum-

THE D. LOTHROP Co. are sending out their last instalment of holiday literature. The more notable books for boys and girls are "Round the World Stories," by Miss Seward, daughter of the reat War Secretary; "Our Asiatic Cousins," by Mrs. Leonowens, the famous English governess at Eastern courts; "Naval Cadet Bentley," by H. H. Clarke, of the United States Navy; "Lotus Bay," by Laura D. Nichols, teaching the young the names and properties of objects found on the seashore, and especially at Cape Cod; and "The Second Year of the Lookabout Club," by Mary E. Bamford, illustrated by Hiram Barnes, giving much information concerning things creeping, swimming, and flying. For slightly older readers the volumes are "Wellsprings of Wisdom" gathered from the writings of F. W. Robertson, by Rose Porter; "Dear Old Story-Tellers," by Oscar Fay Adams; "Aids to Endeavor," a selection of daily readings by Mrs. Castle, prefaced by Rev. Wm. Clark; "Superior to Circumstances," by Emily Lucas Blackwell; and "The Shop. by Rev. E. A. Winship, editor of the Journal of Education. They will soon publish a life of Anne Bradstreet, by Helen Campbell. Anne Bradstreet has been called "the grandmother of American literature." She was the daughter of one of the colonial Governors of Massachussetts, and became the wife of another. Cotton Mather praised her with enthusiasm.

A NEW book by Henry Bacon, the artist, is announced in Paris. It is entitled: "Cica: la fille du bandit," and it will have sixty illustra-

FROM an advertisement in the London Daily News, dated November 16, we learn that the firm of Kegan Paul, Trench & Co., of Paternoster Square, Trübner & Co., of Ludgate Hill, and George Redway & Co., of York St., London, have been amalgamated and will hereafter do business ander the firm-name of Kegan Paul, Trench, Tribner & Company (limited). The notice is signed St. John Winne, Secretary pro tem., 12 and 14 Catherine St., Strand.

THE publishing house of George Routledge & Sons, which was started by the late Mr. George Routledge in the year 1835, is, in consequence of his death, to be turned into a limited liability company. The whole of the preference and ordinary shares, amounting to £200,000, will remain in the hands of the present partners in the firm (Messrs. Robert W. Routledge and Edmund Routledge), who will be the managing directors of the new company .- Athenaum.

T. FISHER UNWIN, London, has just published "The Lady from the Sea," by Henrik Ibsen, translated by Eleanor Marx-Aveling, with critical introduction by Edmund Gosse. This is the first volume of their Cameo Series, in which will be included chiefly lyrical and dramatic poetry. by writers who have either already won attention or deserve it. Frontispieces and illustrations, or portraits, will be added when necessary, and titlepages and cover will be designed by Joseph Pen-For those who appreciate choice books, a special edition has been prepared, limited to thirty copies.

GREAT SENATORS OF THE UNITED STATES Forty Years Ago (1848 and 1840). with Personal Recollections and Delineations of Calhoun, Benton, Clay, Webster, General Houston, Jefferson Davis, etc. By OLIVER Robert Bonner's Sons, Publishers, t m

"Great Senators" is emphatically the book of the season. The critics and reviewers give it unstinted praise. The New York Tribune concludes a two-column review of it thus:

"This book will be read with the keenest pleasure by all who are old enough to have been brought up in the traditions of half a century ago, while it can be com-mended to young men as a treasure-house of information concerning perhaps the most striking and able group of statesmen the Union has known."

The New York Times savs:

"Mr. Dyer's relation with the great Senators of forty years ago was one very fortunate for the acquiring of fresh impressions. It is impossible to read his reminis-cences without being aware that the impressions he reports are genuine."

The New York Sum savs :

"Among the recent contributions to American history none is worthy of more serious attention than a volume entitled 'Great Senators,' by Oliver Dyer. "It would be easy to fill columns with effective ex-tracts from this volume, but we must confine ourselves to tracts from this volume, but we must comme ourselves to two or three examples of incisive and impartial delinea-tion. Mr. Dyer's analysis of Webster's individuality is the most searching that we have seen—indeed, it is the only one which accounts at once for the triumphs and the shortcomings of the great parliamentary champion of the Union."

The New York Press says:

"In the book, 'Great Senators of the United States Forty Years Ago,' are told, as Dyer only could tell, stories of Calhoun, Benton, Clay, Webster, Houston, and Jeff Davis, with personal recollections and delineations. The personal descriptions given by Dyer of these great men are photographic in preclaion and lifelike as touched up by the anecdotal stroke of a master."

"Great Senators" is supplied to the trade by Robert Bonner's Sons. Any one who does not find "Great Senators" at the bookstores can obtain a copy, postage paid, by sending a dollar to

The completion of this highly important and exhaustive

The completion of this highly important and exhaustive work, after the lapse of so many years after its inception, was made memorable by the death of both of its learned and accomplished editors, during its passage through the press. It was finally finished last year by the daughter of one of them (Miss Catherine Laing), in a manner that leaves nothing to be desired. Having secured, under peculiarly favorable circumstances, a small edition, the undersigned is enabled to offer the work at the very low price above mentioned. Those desirous of securing copies should immediately address

By ALBION W. TOURGEE. Author of " A Fool's Errand," etc.

12mo, Cloth, $1.00.

It is needless to say this work has the stamp of peculiar vigor and originality which has secured for Judge Tourgée's other novels such wide population ularity. It enters a somewhat new field, though one with which the author is most familiar, and gives free scope to his quaint humor, keen satire, and well-known fondness for socio-political questions. The book holds the reader to the end with a unique and varied fascination.

TWENTY MONTHS OF QUEST AND QUERY.

By FRANK VINCENT,

Author of "The Land of the White Blephant," "Through and Through the Tropics,"
"Two Months in Burmah," "The Wonderful Ruins of Cambodia," "Norsh, Lapp, and Finn," "In and Out of Central America,"
"Stray Sketches of Travel and Travellers," etc.

With Maps, Plans, and Fifty-four Full-page Illustrations.

xxiv-473 pages, 8vo. Ornamental Cloth, $5.00.

HIS volume will prove a valuable contribution to geographical knowledge. No former traveller has made so comprehensive and thorough a tour of Spanish and Portuguese America. Mr. Vincent visited every capital, chief city, and important seaport, made several expeditions into the interior of Brazil and the Argentine Republic, and ascended the Paraná, Paraguay, Amazon, Orinoco, and Magdalena Rivers. No aspect of man or nature seems to have been neglected by him. He breakfasts in the crater of Pichincha, 16,000 feet above the sea level; describes with enthusiasm the Lima belles; he hobnobs with the Fuegians; he hunts in the forlorn Falklands; he explores falls in the centre of the continent, which, though meriting the title of "Niagara of South America," are all but unknown to the outside world; he spends months in the picturesque capital of Rio Janeiro, and has several interesting interviews with the now deposed Emperor; he visits the coffee districts, studies the slaves, descends the gold mines, views the greatest rapids of the globe, enters the isolated Guianas, and, finally, after a second inspection of the Panama Canal, reaches home.

In view of the present public interest in the "States to the south of us," the recent coup-a' etat in Brazil, and the meeting of the Pan-American Congress, Mr. Vincent's elaborate work will prove opportune.

THE BIBLE

AND

MODERN DISCOVERIES.

By HENRY A. HARPER,

Author of "Walks in Palestine," etc., and Member of the Executive Committee of the Palestine Exploration Fund.

WITH MAP AND ILLUSTRATIONS.

One Volume, 8vo, $4.50.

In the Introduction to this book Mr. Walter Besant says: "Mr. Henry A. Harper has been a traveller, not a tourist; not once, but twice, his feet have lingered over these holy fields. He is an artist who has painted the lands of Palestine, Sinai, and Egypt; he has a profound knowledge of the Bible and a deep love for every portion of it; his reading is not limited to St. Paul on the one hand nor to the Book of Job on the other. He knows every part of the Bible. He has been for a great many years an active member of the Committee of this Society. And, finally, he has shown in his 'Letters to My Children from the Holy Land' how well he can illustrate with pen and pencil the scenes of the Bible.

"In this new work, therefore, the author has attempted a thing hitherto untried. He has taken the sacred history as related in the Bible step by step, and has retold it with explanations and illustrations drawn from modern research and from personal observation."

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE BAKER & TAYLOR Co. will shortly publish the proceedings of the Boston Conference of the Evangelical Alliance, probably under the title of "National Needs and Remedies," and uniform with "National Perils and Opportunities."

CHARLES L. WEBSTER & Co. publish this week Mark Twain's new book, "A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court," which satirizes the shams, the laws and customs of to-day under pretence of dealing with the England of the sixth century. It is fully illustrated by Daniel Beard.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS have just ready Said in Fun," a collection of the late Philip H. Welch's wittlest sayings, with considerable unpublished matter from his pen. These jokes and funny paragraphs are illustrated with full-page drawings by seventeen of the leading American humorous artists.

THE BANCROFT-WHITNEY COMPANY, San Francisco, Cal., have just issued the first two volumes of Lawson's "Rights, Remedies and Practice." The work, which is to be complete in seven volumes, issued at the rate of one a month, does not deal in theories, but is written for the practical every-day use of the profession. It is claimed, indeed, that no author, since the time of Chancellor Kent, has attempted so comprehensive and logical work on American law.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. announce to-day The Bible and Modern Discoveries," by Rev. Henry A. Harper, connected with the Palestine Exploration Fund. He has written other books of much interest on Palestine, but the peculiar feature of this book is that it connects the remarkable discoveries made in the Holy Land with the Bible narrative. It promises to be a book of unusual value to Sunday-school teachers and scholars.

JOHN P. MORTON & Co., Louisville, Ky., have in preparation a work on "Kentucky Jurisprudence," by Lewis N. Dembitz of the Louisville bar. The plan of the book is original and will claim the attention of thoughtful jurists throughout the Union. On the subjects treated in the book it will be full and almost exhaustive, being intended rather for the practitioner than for the student. It will find room for such full treatment by leaving out those branches of Kentucky law in which no departure has been made from the common course of American law, or which do not fall within the scope of the work, D. APPLETON & Co. will publish at once an excellent text-book for manual training classes in schools and colleges by Dr. Ivin Sickels, entitle; "Exercises in Wood-Working." The book cosists of two parts: the first, a treatise on wood. including the growth, structure, properties, and kinds, cause of decay, destructive insects, and means of preserving wood. The second part contains a description of tools, methods in drawing used to illustrate the exercises, and methods of sharpening tools. These are followed by thirtynine progressive exercises, arranged as follows: Practice with the ordinary Wood-Working Tools; Construction of Simple Joints; Construction of Complex Objects; Elements of House-Carpentry; and Directions for Finishing Work. The exercises are illustrated by full-page plates, and are accompanied by numerous applications. tions for each exercise are printed on the page opposite its diagrams, and particular attention has been paid to marking or laying out the work preparatory to cutting.

A LOVER OF LITERATURE. - Mr. Seaside (during an inspection of his friend Dr. de Grolier's library).—You seem to be a great admirer of Dickens.

Dr. de Grolier.-Yes, indeed! I have all his works here in the original numbers, uncut, and I don't even allow them to be dusted by any hand but my own. - Puck.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

Felix Farley tells the story of the stormy love affairs of his best friend, Geoffrey Trevor. At thirty Geoffrey neither liked nor disliked anybody, had an instinctive clinging to Farley, tobacco, and sleep, and, according to himself, might as well have been a mummy. Most unexpectedly he becomes engaged to Helen Courtice, a beautiful worldly girl, who is coaxed by friends to go to Europe to spend the summer. Then Geoffrey meets his fate in Alexia, the fair granddaughter of an old fisherman, who has been carefully educated by some Sisters of the Anglican Church. The little book is full of excellent conversations, the end is naturally brought about. Prettly bound in crimson satine with design of oars and cordage.

The scene opens on a ghastly crime committed in a London gambling den. One of the spectators is suspected by the angry mob, and they chase him like sleuth-hounds; he evades them by entering an adjacent house. Here circumstances conspire against him, and anger and self-preservation incite him to a deed that colors his entire life. He leaves his refuge safe in body but haunted with a remorse that proves a lifelong one. Minor complications and incidents occur at Fenton-by-sea, but all revolve on the sin of Mr. Crawford. on the sin of Mr. Crawford.

In 1883, a volcanic cruption almost eliminated the island of Krakatoa. This fact is the theme of the story. The scenes are many of them events of history vividly portrayed. The chief characters are Captain Ray, of the brig Sunskins. Nigel his son, and the hermit who lived in a cave of Rakata. The chief incident is the great natural phenomena, but the minor ones also savor of the wonderful.

Bernard knew no other but his baptismal name. He had been educated by Mme. Désambiers, who had traced in him the child of a former lover. She destined Bernard for the priesthood, but he learned to love a sweet girl devoted to her mother, and became a teacher. Fortune made him tutor to his deformed brother in his unknown father's family. French life among the well-to-do and the gay recklessness of the deformed child's mother furnish themes for a well-translated story. The explation of the old Count Volonzoff has dramatic force.

The old village of Sunbury in Middleser, Rngland, is the scene. The characters are "Kit," or rather Christopher Orchardson, his uncle Cornelius, who has been a father to him, and who is the owner of a luxurious fruit garden, Miss Kitty Fairthorn, of Coldpepper Manor, her father, step-mother, etc., with a number of minor village people. The story is an every-day love-tale, with its lattle hopes and fears, there being a "villain" as usual to interrupt its course. The character-drawing is the strong point, the different persons being strongly delineated. The time is 1860 and thereafter.

In studying the Book of Job as poetry the first and most difficult duty was to render the poetry into English. The text that has been translated is that edited by L. Baer and Franz Delitzsch, Leipzig, 1875. The translation is rhythmical movement of the original, and no attempt has been made to divide the poem into stanzas. The translation is followed by an analytical interpretation of the poem, showing the poet's conception of God, human life, and nature. The author considers the Hebrew bard the unapproachable master of Homer and Milton.

Years ago, when the Pawnees lived in Nebraska, the author camped and hunted with them, and joined in their village life. The nights were given up to story-telling, and many of the tales told in the lodge and by the flickering camp-fire were carefully translated and written down. These afterward excited great interest among those to whom they were read, and Mr. Grinnell was urged to extend the collection. With such purpose, in March, 1889, he made a literary pilgrimage to the Pawnee reservation in the Indian Territory, renewed his acquaintance with the ancient men of the tribe, and spent a month in patiently recording their stories and traditions. He brought back a rich store of veritable treasure—tales of daring and adventure, weird accounts of magic and mystery and the supernatural; relations of the ways of life in the old, wild days; stories of war and the craft of war parties, the history of the tribe as treasured by the very old men; and, in short, a fund of good things, so fresh and ingenuous, that the book which he has made of them will be a genuine surprise.

N. Y., Worthington Co., 1889. c. tr. 340 p. il. D. cl., $1.25; pap., 75 c.

The author of "Gertrude's marriage" and "Two daughters of one race" has again written a study in women's characters. Magdalen, left an orphan in early womanhood, is forced to accept the shelter and protection of her father's sisters, who trace their brother's ruined life to her adored mother. Her quiet strength finally conquers the heterogenous characters composing this family with a secret, and the end is peaceful for her brother and herself. Aunt Edith's cats play important parts. A good picture of German life—printed, fillustrated, and bound uniform with the author's former volumes.

Elenderson, W. J. The story of music. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1889. c. 14+212 p.

D. cl., $1.25.

Designed to give a succinct account of the progressive steps in the development of modern music as an art. The history of art is separated from the biography of artists. The salient points of musical history are reviewed with comprehensive brevity. Intended especially for lovers of music who have not the time nor sufficient knowledge to read with profit the exhaustive standard histories. A chronological table of musical dates has been prepared with care, beginning with the birth of St. Ambrose in 333 and ending with the production of Verdi's "Otello" in 1887. Special space is devoted to Richard Wagner and his work. Happily dedicated to H. C. Bunner.

Peter, the son of a well-to-do farmer, has been sent to college to study law, and liberally supplied with money to strengthen his position among his associates. His father has dreams of visiting him when he shall have been made President of the United States and considers him sure of worldly honors in any line. To the surprise of his family Peter announces his intention to study theology. He leaves sore hearts behind him. However, he is soon ordained and preaches a sermon of "Advice to parents" that is the beginning of a successful career.

Dr. Arnold changed the face of education all through the public schools of England, and was an historian and a reformer in many departments of church and state. He was born in 1795, at West Cowes, in the Isle of Wight. In 1818 he was ordained Deacon at Oxford, and soon began teaching young men. In 1827 he was elected to the Head-Mastership of Rugby School, and taught there until his death in 1842. This warm sketch of his life is dedicated to Dean Stanley, author of "The life of Dr. Arnold," and to Dr. Hughes, author of "Tom Brown's schooldays."

The author is the daughter of the late William H. Seward, and the editor of his "Travels around the world." She includes here such recollections of travel with her father as she thinks will interest young people. They comprise, "A journey to Pekin," a description of the great wall of China, a coaching party in Java, the Prince of Bandong and his son, a typhoon, a monsoon, some stories of animals, an account of Trianon, and a visit to Kensington Palace.

Contains papers by Principal Shairp on Thomas Brskine, of Linlathan, Bishop Cotton, of Calcutta, Arthur Hugh Clough, Norman Macleod, Dr. McLeod Campbell, and others. They are marked by the same combined vigor and refinement which characterize the books published by him during his lifetime, with a pronounced and sympathetic loyalty to the noble friends he commemorated and to the high principles and aims which shaped his career and character. The tribute of Professor Sellar and the fine portrait of Principal Shairp will be welcome to his American readers.

The author is compiler of "The library of national records," a most valuable collection of scraps and pamphlets on American history now in the possession of Columbia College. The present volume aims to present concisely the brilliant record made by New York State in the various forms of activity necessary to the suppression of the rebellion. He dedicates his book to the eleven hundred commissioned officers of the volunteer regiments of New York who were killed in the struggle, whose names, together with particulars of death, appear in the volume. The information given is crowded into twenty chapters, the remainder being devoted to three appendixes. Appendix I, gives the names of 1000 New York heroes and how they distinguished themselves; Appendix II, gives the New York regiments, subdivided under State militia, cavalry, artillery, engineer and volunteer infantry regiments. Appendix III. contains the roll of the dead. A sixteen page index makes this valuable historical information available.

HOW TO MAKE PUBLISHING "PAY."

THERE were old-fashioned times when a publisher made his business pay by the old-fashioned methods of putting his own brains as well as his author's into his books, arranging his prices and discounts so that an intelligent and capable distributing machinery could place them before readers all over the country, and paving a hundred cents on the dollar to paper-makers, printers. authors, and others concerned. We do not say that that day has gone by, and that there are no longer old-fashioned publishers who follow the old-fashioned methods. But we do say that the modern theory of publishing, as exemplified in many recent instances, is sadly different. The recipe for publishing that "pays," according to these modern methods, is somewhat as follows:

In the first place, form a corporation, preferably under the laws of some State which enables any amount of business to be done on small capital without risk except to creditors. It will be easy to find paper-makers who will sell you in as large quantities as you want, either charging you an extra couple of cents a pound more or less for insurance, or expecting at a closer price to recoup most of their probable loss when a break comes by such profit as they have made from you, and taking the balance out of the old-fashioned people who do pay them a hundred cents on the dollar. It will also be easy to find printers who will be willing to take the risk of trusting you indefinitely, shrewdly knowing that they can recoup themselves, when it is time for a break to come conveniently, by closing a mechanic's lien on the paper which they have printed up for you, leaving the paper-maker to that extent as well as other creditors out in the cold. There are banks which will assist you in your glorious career by "taking the chances" and discounting your paper or assisting you to "swap" notes and otherwise "financier." By carefully watching what copyright books or books on which copyright is expiring have paid the publishers who have pushed them to success, you will find a considerable amount of reprinting material already tested for you, and its supply can be eked out with enough American authors, some of whom can be induced to pay for the plates, whether you pay the bills of the electrotyper or not, to give the list a sprinkling of originality. Put the price on these lines at several times what you expect to get, so that when the books come to be soid the contrast between "publishers' prices" and "our prices" will prove a tempting bait to the unthinking public. A periodical in which von can induce your fellow-publishers to help you by their advertising support, or through which you can get in exchange books which you can job, or which will enable you to "swap" for other advertising, will help you to carry on business at other people's expense. In this way a large business can be successfully started on small capital by an enterprising man who is not too scrupulous about the ordinary Christian virtues.

It will next be in order to look after the distributing machinery for your books. The first thing is to sell to jobbers as much as they will buy and to send out travellers to the "regular" book trade throughout the country and stock up the retail stores to the greatest possible extent. This being done, the next point in the machinery is the supply of the dry-goods bazaar or of local "cheap John" agents at somewhat lower rates than you have been supplying the regular trade, so that the "butchers" may be induced to buy because of the opportunity to undercut the "regnlars" to whom you have already sold. But this by no means fills out the measure of the enterprise of a publisher of the modern pattern. The next thing to do is to start a peripatetic auctioneer, who can be sent into a town and undersell both the regular bookdealer to whom you have sold and the "cheap John" bazaar who has been undercutting him. In this way, a vast market can be made. But there are still two methods left. The library associations, which make so much of a point of "publishers' prices" and "our prices," find much of their opportunity in books of fiction priced on this happy plan, and they should absorb a fair quantity from your stock. Finally, you yourself can undercut everybody to whom you have sold by offering your standard sets as premiums for your periodical at next-tonothing or something less. Any man who cas't get rid of a lot of stock in these several ways is certainly not "smart."

These processes lead to a career of phenomenal enterprise and wonderful prosperity which will last for months and possibly years. When things begin to look shaky an additional resource will be found in selling stock in small lots and then suggesting to stockholders that they will be personally liable for good round losses unless they "pony up" an all-round assessment which alone is required to put the busines on a thriving basis. This little plan cannot be worked more than twice, and by and by will come time for a new and final stroke. This final resource is an ordinary bankruptcy of the day, in which you arrange for a number of preferred claims, designating an assignee to represent you or getting a receiver appointed by the court on your nomination, and then notify the creditors who are out in the cold that they may come in on your terms or stay out, as they please. Chapter one being thus finished, you begin promptly on chapter two. Reorganize your company under a new name by compromising with the larger creditors at whatever percentage their persistence and "cheek" may require—anywhere from 25 to 50 per cent. in different cases. Give notes for the old company for the amount of the compromise to those who have come into the arrangements, and severely ignore those who have not. Then explain that the new company is an entirely different organization from the old, and in more or less pleasant a metaphor inform those who are frozen out that their impudence in asking for their money will receive no further attention. It is perhaps well to pay the notes covering the first or second instalments, but after that it is scarcely worth while to bother with the other notes. By this time most of the creditors will have become so discouraged that they will not bother you very much, though they may call you names in private conversation. But you won't mind this. You have now, repurchased your old stock, with the help perhaps of your paper-maker and printer, who are chiefly concerned, at 25 per cent. or so of the original cost, and the door is open for a career of underselling even more glorious than before. Books made at the expense of the other creditors at a quarter the cost of their paper and print can be sold at a wonderful cheapness, and your special agents throughout the country can now begin a "war" on the regular local booksellers, who have the effrontery to ask a price which enables them to pay for their books, that will bring crowds to the book-butchers, indignant every mother's son of them at the outrageous prices charged for books by the regular trade. And so on.

This is a picture drawn from the life. We do not mean to say that any one house of the several which have run their glorious career within recent years has reached that apex and acme of smartness which has enabled them to use all these means of prosperity and so scale the topmost height of publishing success under the new methods. That Napoleon of the trade is yet to arise and burst upon the wondering world. But each one of the methods we have indicated has been used in the course of "trade development" in the past few years, and in each case it has been looked upon with a shrug and a grin as rather smart."

It is perhaps a minor consolation to reflect that permanent success is not built up in this way. We do not find in existence to-day houses which were built up by this process a generation ago, and possibly our successors a generation hence will no longer know the now flaring names of the houses which in this generation are building themselves up and knocking other people down on these methods. But the prevalence of those methods has made it almost impossible for a new publisher to start in business and to make a legitimate success in the old-fashioned hundred-cents-on-thedollar way. And it is largely the fault of the oldfashioned publishers themselves, who have for the last fifteen or twenty years been shutting their eves to the fact that their own methods give opportunity to these men.

How long, how long, shall these things be?

"WAR" has broken out again—this time on the Pacific Coast. It started between the San Francisco representatives of the Belford, Clarke concern and the Bancroft house, and of course has demoralized the trade in every bookstore in that important city. Messrs. Samuel Carson & Co., who "keep a poet," take a hand in the fray in rhyme in the advertising columns of the daily papers. This "war" is doubtless one of the incidental results of the Belford, Clarke failure and shows how directly episodes of this interesting kind demoralize the distributing machinery throughout the country.

THE COPYRIGHT BREAKFAST TO COUNT DE KÉRATRY.

A COMPLIMENTARY breakfast was given to Count Emile de Kératsy, at Delmonico's at one o'clock last Saturday, Dec. 7, by American authors, artists, and publishers, most of them members of the American Copyright League. Count de Kératry is in this country as the authorized representative of the sentiment of international copyright of the Société de Gens de Lettres, Société des Auteurs Dramatiques, and other French literary societies, and as an envoy of the French Government to present a draft of an international copyright treaty to our Department of State. He was born at Paris in 1832 and came from an old family of Brittany. His father, a literary man, was in political life, and was one of those who offered the French crown to King Louise Philippe in 1830. George Sand took counsel of him at the beginning of her literary life. Count de Kératry served as cavalry officer in the French Army, and took part in the campaigns of the Crimea, Algeria, and Mexico. He was elected under the Second Empire a member of the French Parliament (1868-70), representing Brittany, as his father previously had done, and was made a member of the National Government of Defence as Préfect of Police of Paris during a part of the siege. Later he was commander-inchief of the forces in Brittany (60,000 men), and during the government of M. Thiers he was Préfect of Toulouse, Marseilles, and Lyons. He has since retired from public life, and has devoted his time to literature, having written the following books: "The Rise and Fall of the Emperor Maximilian." "A Narrative of the Mexican Empire," "The Contre-Guerilla in Mexico," "Life of Sultan Mourad," "Revolution of the 4th of September," "The Army of Brittany," and "Military and Political Souvenirs." The Count is also one of the prominent contributors to the Paris Figaro and is a member of the Société des Gens de Lettres.

The walls of the large banqueting hall were hung with American and French flags and coatsof-arms, and an immense bank of roses and chrysanthemums adorned the speakers' table. In the absence of James Russell Lowell, the President of the Copyright League, Bishop Potter presided. The others at the President's table were ex-Senator Jonathan Chace, of Rhode Island, the champion in the United States Senate of the international copyright movement; Dr. Patton, President of Princeton College; Dr. Edward Eggleston, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Copyright League; Richard Henry Stoddard, Bronson Howard, C. F. Daly, W. Morton Grinnell, Professors Marsh and Lounsbury, Parke Godwin, George Parsons Lathrop, and Frederic R. Coudert.

There were five tables at right angles with the guests' table, at which were nearly 150 authors, artists, and representatives of great publishing houses, including A. Stedman, F. H. Hall, W. L. Keese, R. R. Bowker, T. Manson, H. L. Nelson, T. A. Janvier, J. H. Harper, J. B. Townsend, A. C. Gunter, G. W. Presbury, John Foord, T. De Thulstrup, Archdeacon Alexander Mackay Smith, L. Abbott, J. C. Dwight, A. Perry, J. B. Leavitt, J. T. Bixby, T. W. Knox, B. Tuckerman, T. W. Dewing, K. Cox, D. L. Proudfit, F. Lathrop, Henry Marquand, Prof. Allan Marquand of Princeton College, Charles Scribner, Horace White, G. E. Pond, Gen. J. B. Fry, P. Bigelow, Richard M. Hunt, E. Johnson, W. A. Coffin, J. D. Champlain, Jr., H. T. Thomas, A. Scribner, Charles R. Miller, E. Kelly, Brayton Ives, Russell Sturgis, R. Cox, J. B. Walker, J. Pott, B. Van Wagenen, Rev. Robert Collyer, C. A. Clapp. Thomas Clark, T. Niles, Rossiter Johnson, A. D. F. Randolph, F. E. Elwell, Henry Abbey, J. M. Ludlow, J. J. Little, H. O. Houghton, L. Valentine, M. Mallory, C. D. Pratt, J. Du Fais, A. W. Drake, C. J. Taylor, C. B. Mapes, W. F. Clarke, W. L. Fraser, William Carey, H. C. Bunner, Brander Matthews, William H. Low, A. St. Gaudens, Richard Watson Gilder, Henry Holt, H. E. Krehbiel, John Lafarge, W. C. Brownell, A. Thayer, J. B. Gilder, E. Cary, W. C. Church, C. C. Buel, H. W. Mabie, Laurence Hutton, Frank R. Stockton, Mabie, Laurence Hutton, Frank R. Stockton, J. W. De Forest, Montgomery Schuyler, Robert Underwood Johnson, H. F. Osborn, R. L. Frothingham, C. H. Phelps, H. N. Powers, A. Matthews, P. H. Butler, G. W. Green, Joseph F. Daly, B. Blakeman, A. C. Barnes, W. H. Appleton, H. R. Elliott, S. L. Clemens (Mark Twain), F. H. Scott, C. F. Chichester, W. C. Osborne, G. A. Plimpton, C. Lippincott, Dean Sage C. Bainbridge, W. Bispham, C. B. Foote, S. P. C. Bainbridge, W. Bispham, C. B. Foote, S. P. Avery, T. L. De Vinne, Gen. Horace Porter, and W. W. Appleton.

The musicians' balcony was filled with ladies in street costumes, most of them relatives of the gentlemen who were below, among whom were Mrs. Gilder, Mrs. Burton N. Harrison, Mrs. Laurence Hutton, Mrs. C. C. Buel, and Mrs. Brander Matthews.

After the breakfast Bishop Potter said: "Gentlemen and ladies, there is one shadow upon the charm of this occasion, and that is that the one person who should have presented our distinguished guest to you is unavoidably absent. I refer to the Hon. James Russell Lowell, our President, and our Secretary will now read his letter to you." Mr. Lowell's name was heartly applauded : his letter was as follows :

ELMWOOD, CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 3, 1889.

BLMWOOD, CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 3, 1889.

R. U. Johnson, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: I regret very sincerely that it will not be in my power to be with you on so interesting an occasion. But there will be enough earnest and representative men present to convince M. de Kératry that our country will erelong unite with all other civilized nations in recognizing the rights of those who contribute to civilization the element always and everywhere acknowledged as the highest and most efficient. I have seen nothing to shake my faith in the permanent good sense and right feeling of the American people, and feel sure, therefore, that they will, however alowly, be brought to see not only that honesty is the best policy from the selish point of view, but that it is the only policy by which all conflicting interests can be effectually reconciled and assured.

Faithfully yours,

J. R. Lowell.

E-Decalident Cleveland's letter was then an-

Ex-President Cleveland's letter was then an-It was as follows: nounced amid loud cheers.

My DEAR MR. JOHNSON: I hope that I need not assure you how much I regret my inability to be with you and other friends and advocates of international copyright in this hour. It seems to me very strange that a movement having so much to recommend it to the favor of just and honest men should languish in the hands of our lawmakers.

makers. It is not pleasant to have forced upon one the reflection that perhaps the fact that it is simply just and fair is to its present disadvantage. And yet I believe, and I know you and the others engaged in the cause believe, that ultimately and with continued efforts the friends of this reform will see their hopes realized. Then it will be a great satisfaction to know and feel that success was achieved by force of fairness, justice, and morality.

Yours very truly, GROVER CLEVELARD.

Letters and despatches were received from Thomas A. Edison, Gen. W. T. Sherman, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, Presidents Eliot, Dwight, and Low, Chauncey M. Depew, and John Big-

When these letters were concluded and applauded, Bishop Potter said that the question naturally arose in the minds of his listeners why he presided. [Cries of "No! No!"] "But," he went on, "if I have been absent from the meetings of the League in person I have been there in spirit, and I think that I am entitled to remind myself and you, gentlemen, that my interest in this work is a good deal older than many of you to whom I speak." The speaker related an anecdote of Thackeray's visit to this country, when he encountered a misedited edition of his works which had been pirated, and wondered "if some enterprising person has resurrected many ill-shapen brats, why I was not paid for their exposure." He spoke of the increasing friendly feeling between the authors and publishers of various countries, and declared that to ' nation are we deeper indebted for this than the country of the distinguished gentleman who is our guest this morning. Of all the countries our guest this morning. Of all the countries France stands foremost in the ranks of the nations in favor of the author, whether he be literary, dramatic, or artistic. Great in arms and in letters, we must not forget to be grateful to this gentleman, our guest, and we must remember that many years ago there came to us another who made the names of Lafayette and France dear to every American—this, our guest, gentle-men, is a new Lafayette—a Lafayette of letters."

Then Count de Kératry was introduced, was greeted with cheers, and read his response, in French, substantially as follows:

"GENTLEMEN: You who are firm friends of the great doctrine of the right of authors, in assembling at this banquet to which you have invited me, have generously wished to welcome through me, an humble French author, all the literary and artistic societies of France which profess the same sentiments as yourselves upon this important question, and of which I am the accredited representative in the United States. In their name I thank you for this honor and for this noble evidence of your sympathy. I can assure you that such evidence, unsought and unsolicited by me, inspires in me sentiments of gratitude and pride. I am grateful to you because your reception encourages and strengthens my efforts in the campaign which I have undertaken, and I am proud, because if I mistake not this is the first time that American men of letters have given a special and formal welcome to a representative of their comrades in

"You have well understood, as have we gentlemen, that in this American commonwealth, whose existence is due to the thinker, and where your labor has brought forth marvels, both material and intellectual, the time has come to protect the literary and artistic property of the world. realize that this should be as certain as the protection of real or personal property; that it is equally entitled to the respect of all, and that the time has come to put an end to a condition of affairs which every consideration of honesty con-

"Some shortsighted persons, I know, have protested against any idea of international copyright, invoking the chimerical fear of the greater expense of books to the detriment of the education of the lower classes. But this objection has been victoriously answered by one of your greatest literary stars, the Hon. Mr. Lowell, whose appointment to Madrid and London was the envy of Paris. I will not dwell upon the petty and interested calculations in favor of the continuation of literary piracy, nor of the pre-tended injury to your national industry. In your care for elevating the intellectual level of the popular classes you must take care to banish the vicious literature culled from the slums of Europe and substitute honest and noble work emanating from our greatest writers.

"If you, on your side, appreciate our theatre, if you appreciate some of our poets and novelists, we do not the less appreciate the old-time poetic romances of Cooper, whose picturesque stories of the Indian and the pioneer have charmed the boyhood of France for more than a generation; the brilliant history of the conquest of Mexico and Peru, painted in such vivid colors by the magic pen of Prescott; the graphic narrative of the Titan struggles of the Netherlands against Spanish oppression, which has won so many deserved honors for Motley; the weird imaginations of Edgar Allan Poe; the pure and delicious idyls of Longfellow, charming the heart and ennobling the mind; the romance of Hawthorne, picturing New England of the first half of the century; and among the living, the sympathetic tales of Bret Harte and of many others of your writers. / Does not our Revue des Deux Mondes charm us by the ever-varying grace and novelty of your new and brilliant writers? Is not the literary and artistic work of your American magazines regarded with admiration and envy in France? And lastly, gentlemen, do not the great honors bestowed on American publishing houses by the International Jury of the Exposition of 1889 show clearly that you have nothing to fear from foreign competition and prove that America and Europe have every interest in exchanging on honorable terms their creations of literature and art?

"In the year in which these countries have celebrated the centenary of their emancipation the moment seems propitious to French authors and artists to be allowed to sit by your hearth freely, and let us hope in a near future, without paying the ransom of genius at your frontiers. For the United States are sufficiently rich to pay for the luxury of a broad hospitality, since you admit the possession of greater wealth than you can use.
"The International Literary and Artistic Society, a child of our Authors' League, and founded by Victor Hugo, includes in its annals the most illustrious names of every country, with one great exception - your own. Like your American Copyright League, it battles for the good cause unceasingly. Since 1875, the date of its foundation, to 1889 it has held twelve international congresses and has rallied under the banner of justice to authors all the governments of Europe. It has held its meetings in London, Lisbon, Vienna, Rome, Berne, Amsterdam, Brussels, Antwerp, Madrid, Venice, and, lastly, in Paris. Do you not also feel the desire at the beginning of the international exposition which you are organizing and which will attract and amaze all Europe—do you not feel the desire to invite the representatives of arts and letters to a new and peaceful international congress on this classic land of liberty? What more beautiful preface could there be to the golden book wherein you inscribe your latest scientific and industrial achievements?

"Do you not, indeed, believe that authors and publishers are building up for posterity monuments as durable as those of artisans and engravers? The shades of Dante and Shakespeare, of Cervantes, of Corneille, and of Victor Hugo await from you the homage due them, and for which they have toiled and suffered—the procla-mation of the dignity and independence of the author. I can close in no better terms than by quoting the last words, full of promise, pronounced at the Literary International Conference of Berne. in 1886, by Mr. Winchester, Minister of and speaking for the United States:
"'The man whose brain creates is entitled to a just and complete remuneration.

Cheers were given in honor of the Count, and then the Bishop pleasantly introduced Dr. Edward Eggleston as Canon Eggleston. He referred to the address of the Count de Kératry, and said that no nation convicted of a succession of highway robberies had ever been told so delicately of its crime. He, too, spoke of this country's indebtedness to France, and declared that had the Revolutionary Fathers not read French literature the Revolution would not have been complete. Dr. Eggleston referred in no measured terms to the disposition of Congress to delay and to defeat the consideration of international copyright. "There is a class of men," he concluded, who like to get on the cowcatcher of the locomotive, and as it slows up they run into the station to inform the curious that they have brought the train in. These men usually delay active work until the train is very nearly in, and they are appearing in our support. appearing on every hand. The train is very nearly in.'

Ex-Senator Chace, of Rhode Island followed. and while he congratulated his associates upon the presence of Count de Kératry among them he declared that there was no time to loiter until international copyright had been absolutely "For," he continued, "literature is the foundation of civilization, and everything we hold most dear is founded upon the profession of literature. Let us see how long this subject has been before the country, and by whom it has been favored. Washington is on record as having favored an international copyright; Madison moved early in it; Jefferson supported it; so did Iames Buchanan before he became President, and joined with Henry Clay in his report upon the necessities for some such measure. Garfield and Arthur, Cleveland and Harrison, have all referred to international copyright in their messages. Fifty years ago Clay made a voluminous report recommending action, and Senator Lot M. Morrill did the same. Why has it been delayed so long? The reason is that not all of the interests have been heretofore combined in union. But to-day we have this union of interests all over our broad land of those who will be deeply interested, so far as their actual living is concerned, in the law. And I am prepared to say that if the newspapers will support this law in no half-hearted way, and the people will urge action by their representatives, the act will become a law before the end of the Fifty-first Congress."

President Patton, of Princeton College, spoke of the many-sided aspect of the subject of international copyright, and said that if Congress could only pass the Chace act, either with or without a reciprocity clause, it would place America even ahead of Great Britain, so far as copyright is concerned. Addresses were also made by Gen. Horace Porter, Frederic R. Coudert, George Parsons Lathrop, and A. D. F.

Randolph.

BUSINESS NOTES.

DETROIT, MICH.—E. E. Chamberlain & Co., booksellers, have gone out of business.

NEW YORK CITY.—Henry K. Van Siclen has removed his stock from his old quarters on Fifth Avenue to 259 West 44th Street. He has a fine stock of books, much of which it would be difficult to duplicate. Mr. Van Siclen has worked hard under great difficulties, and we hope this move will prove beneficial.

NEW YORK CITY.—The "Practical Publishing Company," 21 Park Row, is at present without a head. The matters of the company are in the hands of an attorney and will probably not be settled until January, 1890.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—T. & J. W. Johnson, publishers and importers of law-books, have dissolved partnership. Joseph W. Johnson will continue the business under the same style.

PITTSBURG, KAN.—A. A. Schneider, bookseller, is dead.

Shenandoah, Ia.—Larimore & Stephen, booksellers and stationers, have dissolved partnership.

WALKERVILLE, MONTANA.—N. J. Scott, book-seller, has sold out.

NOTES ON CATALOGUES.

A. D. F. RANDOLPH & Co., 38 W. 23d St., N. Y., have issued a very tasteful catalogue which is a model in its way. The entries are is one main alphabet by author, title, and subject with the exception of separate departments for Booklets and Books for Young People. Under the author's name are given the full titles and bibliographical particulars, with nonpareil notes, biographical or descriptive, original or quoted from reviews, the entries by title and subject being in the nature of cross-references to these main entries. The catalogue is in large 16mo, a handy shape for readers' use, but the plates are of such a size that they can be printed in octave for trade purposes. (86 p. 16°.)

J. W. BOUTON, 1152 Broadway, N. Y., has just issued a catalogue of the extensive and valuable Havemeyer library. The collection is one of unusual excellence and interest. It is seldom, isdeed, that # library so perfect in the essentials so requisite for a gentleman is placed at the disposal of the public in this way. In the number and range, of desirable books, in the choice of editions, in the careful selection of copies, the judicious and often costly bindings, and the perfect condition of the whole, it has seldom been equalled. The library is particularly strong in standard authors and the various departments of the fine arts, and comprises all the most notable art publications, both old and new; galleries and collections of prints, etchings, drawings, and standard treatises in English, French, and German. The catalogue is a bibliographical treat. (118 p., 787 titles, 12°, pap., 25 c.)

Catalogues of New and Second-hand Books.—W. O. Davie & Co., 16 E. 4th St., Cin., December list of additions to stock. (29 p. nar. 16°.)—A. L. Luyster, 98 Nassau St., N. Y., Standard English Books. LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE POET-LORE COMPANY will shortly publish a volume entitled "The Scratch Club," by Hugh A. Clarke.

IRA BRADLEY & Co. have in preparation "Allan Durstan," by Thos. Keyworth; "Rights and Wrongs," by S. S. Pugh; "Her Own Choice," by Ruth Lamb; and "Afterward," by the author of "Winning Her Way."

PAYOT, UPHAM & Co., San Francisco, Cal., have just issued a handy manual for those who play or have a desire to learn to play billiards, in "McCleery's Method of Billiard Playing." It is illustrated with over one hundred diagrams printed in colors.

On Sunday, the 8th inst., the Methodist Church generally celebrated the Centennial of the Methodist Book Concern. The publishing sections, including the journals, etc., and the bookstore, have been removed to Fifth Avenue and Twentieth Street. Full description of the new building has already been given in these columns.

Miss Eleanor Emmons Brown, daughter of Frederick T. Brown, and John Wesley Harper, of the firm of Harper & Brothers, were married on the afternoon of the 7th inst. at the house of the bride's parents, 673 Madison Avenue, New York. The Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale officiated. The bridal pair will spend the winter in Scotland.

THE STATIONERS' BOARD OF TRADE dinner is to be held Thursday evening, January 30. The Dinner Committee consists of Frank Squier, of Perkins, Goodwin & Co., Chairman, Henry C. Bainbridge, of C. T. Bainbridge's Sons, Secretary; W. C. Horn, Samuel I. Knight, C. T. Dillingham, W. G. Berlin, E. I. Horsman, C. E. Hopkins, Oscar S. Greenleaf, and I. M. Loughead.

GINN & Co. will publish at once the first volume of the serial entitled "Harvard Studies in Classical Philology." It is the expectation that one volume, containing about 200 octavo pages, will be issued each year. The contributors will be, for the most part, instructors in the University or graduates of the same, but contributions of other scholars will not be absolutely excluded.

Thos. Y. Crowell & Co. have in preparation a remarkable new novel by Count Roman I. Zubof, entitled "Viera" ("'Twixt the Real and the Ideal"). The scene of the story is laid in England, where Count Zubof has been living for the past five years. It is said to be an interesting psychological study which will appeal to all who are interested in the philosophical and social questions of the day.

A BOOK entitled "Thought and Thrift," written by Joshua Hill, a farmer in Kentucky, is announced as in the press of Raisbeck & Co., No. 19 West 6th St., Cincinnati. It will be a discussion of political and economic questions from the point of view of a practical agriculturalist, which it is said will be of great value and interest to the agricultural classes as well as to those interested in the subject from the economic and political side.

In the case of Otto Chils against Gustave A. Gronlund and the Scandinavian and Finlanders' Emigrant Company, Limited, for damages for the infringement of a copyright of a Swedish-English dictionary, on trial in the United States Circuit Court before Judge Wheeler and a jury, a verdict was rendered in favor of the plaintiff for $2500 damages and all copies of the infringing book found in the possession of the defendants. The trial was begun on Nov. 22, and after continuing for two days and a half was suspended until Tuesday morning.

THE J. G. CUPPLES PUBLISHING Co. have in press a work by Nathaniel Pitt Langford, of St. Paul, entitled "Vigilante Days and Ways, or, the pioneers of the Rockies, being sidelights on the makers and making of Montana, Idaho Oregon, Washington, and Wyoming." It will be published in two volumes, and will be elaborately illustrated. The work will abound in personal reminiscences and anecdotes of characters whose achievements and deeds of daring are household legends throughout the Far West, and tells the history of a time that can never be repeated in this country.

Brown, Thurston & Co., Portland, Me., announce the completion of the six volumes of the York (Me.) Deeds. This work, which has been in progress for the past six years, is one of the most important historical and antiquarian publications relating to the early history of New England that has ever been published, being of particular value and interest to the people of Maine, New Hampshire, and Massachusetts, as in it is found a large portion of the unknown and unwritten history of those States. The work was done under the direction and patronage of the Maine Historical Society and the State of Maine.

THE effect of the Belford-Clarke failure is beginning to show itself. The agents of this house, in order to realize some money we presume, are slaughtering their stock at a great rate. The other booksellers unfortunately are following suit, so that, as a correspondent informs us, "books can be bought to-day cheaper in San Francisco than in New York." Occasionally a little humor finds its way into the contest as the following will show:

DON'T WAIT.

A Bookseller's Lay.

Booksellers " are in the soup,"
The market prices won't recoup
The invoice cost and freight:
Come now and buy, and we will suit
Both old and young. We know it!
Take our advice—don't wait.

Come quick and take a look
At the finest stock of books
On Poet St.—Number two hundred and eight.
The prices are not high,
And the place is quite near by;
Take our advice—don't wait.

We have Milton, Byron, Burns, and Moore,
All in fine bindings, now in store,
Marked in plain figures, at a rebate;
The print is good, the prices low,
At the store of Carson & Co.:
Take our advice—don't wait.

THE HARRIS PUBLISHING Co., 10 Warren St., N. Y., will publish this month the first part of an important work on "Fish and Fishing in America," by William C. Harris, editor of The American Angler, who is well known to the anglers of America through his lifetime devotion to the art of angling. The main features of this work will consist of: A tabulated list of the fishes caught on hook and line in American waters, with their popular and scientific names; An illustration of every fish of the salt and fresh waters that are so caught; A practical essay on each fish, with its habits, habitat, scientific and popular descriptions, and detailed methods of luring it; Descriptions and illustrations of angling devices used by American anglers; A popular introduction, fully illustrated, to the study of ichthyology; The senses of fish - illustrated; and A history of angling literature and fish culture. The illustrations of over two hundred every anatomical detail and the waters, salt and fresh, covered by this work will include those of the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans and the lakes and streams from Canada to Florida, as well as the salt-water fishes of the Gulf of Mexico; in fact, no American fish caught on hook and line will fail to be described and illustrated. The drawings will be in black and white. The work will be published by subscription in forty numbers, issued at the rate of one part each month and quicker if practicable, at 50 cents per number.

A HISTORY of American literature, by Karl Knortz, of this city, will be published shortly in Berlin by Hans Lüstenöder.

MACMILLAN & Co. have nearly ready for issue a new book by Lewis Carroll (the author of "Alice in Wonderland," etc.), entitled "Sylvie and Bruno." It is illustrated by Mr. Harry Furniss.

TRAVELLERS on the Nile will be glad to learn that the second volume of Baedeker's Guide-Book to Egypt is at last about to appear. It will be devoted to a description of Upper Egypt, and has been compiled by the well-known Egyptologist. Prof. Eisenlohr.

BALZAC'S "Chouans" has been translated for the first time into English by George Saintsbury, and has been published by Nimmo as the first volume of a beautifully illustrated historical series, specially intended for connoisseurs. The second volume—illustrated, like the first, by a French artist—contains Prosper Mérimée's "Chronicle of the Reign of Charles IX."

B. F. STEVENS, according to the London Athenaum, has just produced the first volume of his magnificent collection of fac-similes of documents in European archives relating to the United States. The second volume will be ready this month and two more will be in the hands of the subscribers early next year. The total number of copies printed is limited to two hundred.

THE Diary of Frances Burney (Mdme. D'Arblay), which Messrs. Bell will publish immediately, covers the period 1768 to 1778, that is, from her sixteenth to her twenty-seventh year. The volume will also contain a selection from her correspondence, and from the journals of her sisters Susan and Charlotte, edited by Annie Raine Ellis, the editor of Evelina and Cecilia in "Bohn's Library."

THE Marquis of Lorne has made his first essay as a novelist in "A Canadian Love-Story," which will appear shortly in the new weekly journal Now, published in Glasgow. The author gives pictures of life in the Northwest, and some striking scenes in connection with the late Indian rising. The hero is a well-educated young Canadian, who becomes enamoured of the daughter of an Indian chief.

THE fourth volume of Baron Haussman's memoirs, which is shortly to be published in Paris, will describe in detail the inner life of the Second Empire. Among many other matters, the narrative promises to throw a new light on the discussions with Prince Bismarck, at Biarritz and elsewhere, as to the conclusion of an alliance between France and Prussia, and the formation of a German Empire at the expense of Austria. There will also be some unrevealed particulars in connection with the negotiations for peace after the war of 1870, affording much information about the part which Napoleon III. took in them.

It is now just two years since the Academy announced that Lord Carnaryon had found-among the papers which passed into his possession on the death of his mother-in-law, the late Dowager Countess of Chesterfield, widow of the sixth earl a second series of Chesterfield Letters, and that he proposed to edit them for publication. These letters, which number 236, are in an excellent state of preservation. They were addressed by the famous Lord Chesterfield, the fourth earl, to Philip Stanhope, his godson and successor in the title, and may be regarded as a revised version of the celebrated letters to his natural son, who died after he had disappointed his expectations. The subjects are to a great extent the same: the language is often all but identical. But much of the cynicism of the earlier series has evaporated; the morality is on a higher level; the writer appeals to loftier principles than we are wont to associate with his name. The correspondence extends over nine years, beginning in 1761, when Philip Stanhope was in the sixth year of his age.

ONE ON ALLIBONE.—A number of book-meawere relating professional anecdotes the other night. "About twenty years ago," said one of them, "I was employed with the Lippincotts. Thomas Hughes was being lionized very extensively, and when he came down to Philadelphia he came to see the publishing house. After be had inspected the whole establishment and expressed his surprise and gratification, the head of the house took him by the arm and said: 'Now, Mr. Hughes, I want to show you one of our greatest publications—Allibone's Dictionary. It contains some information about every author of any account in England and America. Now let us see, for example, what it says about Mr. Thomas Hughes.' So he turned to H. and, lo! the name of the author of 'Tom Brown's School-Days' wasn't there."—Phila. Press.

[The above has been widely quoted as a good joke. But there is really nothing in it. Allibone never claimed to go beyond the first half of the nineteenth century. Mr. Hughes' "Tom Brown's School-Days," the first book he wrote, was not issued until 1857, and anonymously at that, so that Mr. Allibone could not very well have been expected to include an author who at the time his Dictionary was issued had practically very little reputation "of any account."—ED. P. W.]

An Account of Four Years' Travel in Australia, and of Camp Life with the Aborigines of Queensland. By Carl Lumholtz, M.A. Fully illustrated. 8vo, $5.00.

"Mr Lumholtz selected for his study the lowest race known to exist. Here, in an unvisited corner of Northern Australia, was an indubitably veracious picture of man's life in the infancy of the race. His book is made up of an extraordinary narrative and a series of brilliant pictures."—Batton Transcript.

"Prof. Lumholtz's style is fluent, easy, and graphic, and the book abounds in incidents and anecdotes. Indeed, its entertaining qualities are of the very highest. The book is profusely illustrated and has maps embodying the latest results of travel and discovery in Northern Australia."—Christian Union.

The Book of the Season.

GREAT SENATORS OF THE UNITED STATES Forty Years Ago (1848 and 1840). with Personal Recollections and Delineations of Calhoun, Benton, Clay, Webster, General Houston, Jefferson Davis, etc. By Oliver Robert Bonner's Sons. Publishers. ₿r.oo.

"Great Senators" is emphatically the book of the season. The critics and reviewers give it unstinted praise. The New York Tribung concludes a two-column review of it thus

"This book will be read with the keenest pleasure by all who are old enough to have been brought up in the traditions of half a century ago, while it can be com-mended to young men as a treasure-house of information concerning perhaps the most striking and able group of statesmen the Union has known."

The New York Times savs:

"Mr. Dyer's relation with the great Senators of forty years ago was one very fortunate for the acquiring of fresh impressions. It is impossible to read his reminiscences without being aware that the impressions he reports are genuine."

The New York Sun says:

"Among the recent contributions to American history

"Among the recent contributions to American history none is worthy of more serious attention than a volume entitled 'Great Senators,' by Oliver Dyer.

"It would be easy to fill columns with effective extracts from this volume, but we must confine ourselves to two or three examples of incisive and impartial delineation. Mr. Dyer's analysis of Webster's individuality is the most searching that we have seen—indeed, it is the only one which accounts at once for the triumphs and the shortcomings of the great parliamentary champion of the Union."

The New York Press says:

"In the book, 'Great Senators of the United States Forty Years Ago,' are told, as Dyer only could tell, stories of Calhoun, Benton, Clay, Webster, Houston, and Jeff Davis, with personal recollections and delineations. The Davis, with personal recollections and defineations. The personal descriptions given by Dyer of these great men are photographic in precision and lifelike as touched up by the anecdotal stroke of a master."

"Great Senators" is supplied to the trade by Robert Bonner's Sons. Any one who does not find "Great Senators" at the bookstores can obtain a copy, postage paid, by sending a dollar to

The completion of this highly important and exhaustive work, after the lapse of so many years after its inception, was made memorable by the death of both of its learned and accomplished editors, during its passage through the press. It was finally finished last year by the daughter of one of them (Miss Catherine Laing), in a manner that leaves nothing to be desired. Having secured, under peculiarly favorable circumstances, a small edition, the undersigned is enabled to offer the work at the very low price above mentioned. NOTES IN SEASON.

A. D. F. RANDOLPH & Co. have in press a work on "The Bible and Modern Discoveries," by Henry A. Harper; and "The Old Missionary," by Sir Wm. Henry Hunter.

P. BLAKISTON, SON & Co., Philadelphia, announce that they have arranged with the London publishers to reprint here a new text-book on Anatomy, by Prof. Alexander Macalister, of the University of Cambridge.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. have nearly feady the concluding volume of Justin Winsor's valuable "Narrative and Critical History of America." It covers the later history of British, Spanish, and Portuguese America. A general index accompanies it. They will also publish at an early day a new brochure by Prof. E. N. Horsford, on "The Discovery of the Ancient City of Norumbega." The substance of the book was communicated to the President and Council of the American Geographical Society, at a special session in Watertown, on the 21st of November last. In addition to the historical address, there will be photographs of the site of the ancient city, sixteen maps from Icelandic sources down to the United States Coast Survey, and an original map of the valley of the Charles River from Stony Brook to Cambridge. The book will also include the "Poem of Vinland," delivered at Watertown by Mr. E. H. Clements, of the Boston Transcript.

FUNK & WAGNALLS, New York, announce a new biographical series, American Reformers, edited by Carlos Martyn, D.D., a writer of whom Wendell Phillips said: "If I were looking for a biographer I would lay hands on Mr. Martyn. His arrangement is unique and effective. His grasp is both wide and strong. His historical, scent is keen, as that of an Indian on a trail. There are to be twelve volumes in the series. to be published one each two months, beginning January, to be issued in uniform size and s.yle, 12mo, of about 300 pages each, in cloth, at $1.25 per volume. The subjects and the writers are: "Wendell Phillips the Agitator," by Carlos Martyn, D.D.; "Horace Greeley, the Editor," by Francis Nicoll Zabriskie, D.D.; "Horace Mann, the Educator," by Hon. Frank B. Sanborn; "Wm. E. Dodge, the Christian Merchant," by Carlos Martyn, D.D.; "Abraham Lincoln, the Emancipator," by Prof. C. W. French; "Frederick Douglass, the Colored Orator," by Frederic May Holland; "John G. Whittier, the Poet of Freedom," by Sloane Kennedy; "William Lloyd Garrison, the Abolition-ist," by Hon. Geo. W. Williams, LL.D.; "John B. Gough, the Apostle of Cold Water," by Carlos Martyn; "Charles Sumner, the Scholar in Politics," and "Henry Ward Beecher, the Pulpit Orator."

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MRS. HODGSON BURNETT has recovered from the effects of her recent accident, and has returned to London.

COUNT TOLSTOI is said to be at work on a romance which he will call "La Sonate de Kreutzer."

THE real name of "Marie Corelli," the author of several successful novels, is Minnie Mackay, and she is the daughter of Dr. Charles Mackay, the writer.—N. Y. Tribune.

DURING his imprisonment Mr. William O'Brien has been engaged on a novel, which he hopes to complete before his release at Christmas. It is to be called "When We Were Boys," and will very likely first appear in Lippincott's Magazine.

A BINGHAMTON firm has named a cigar after Walt Whitman. Of course it is made of "Leaves of Grass."

"A portrait in crimson" is pictured by Dr. Van Tassell, His scenes are in New York City and at a country residence on the Hudson. His characters are introduced in a very dramatic way. His plot is made of the experience of a young sculptor who idealizes a stranger and falls is love with this ideal. Its shattering results seriously for him for a while, but the denoument of his story is rather unexpectedly welcome one.

The object of this work is to popularize a knowledge of vocal physiology and visible speech, and to furnish a text-book by means of which these subjects may be taught in schools and colleges. It gives a complete view of the actions of the vocal organs and the resulting elements of speech. The symbols of visible speech are used to depict the various motions and positions of the organs.

 "Browning's fondness for dramatic lyrics is perhaps more strongly marked here than it had been for some time previously, but the lyrics themselves have not the passionate movement, the concentrated energy, of many of his early dramatic poems. Narrative and reflective, introspective verse had become preferred before those of vivid action. The influence of Browning's beloved Italy is strong; sometimes too much so for complete healthfulness. His intellectual restlessness and discontent are expressed even more involvedly than usual in such poems as 'Rephan,' while in 'Reverie' he approaches as near a concrete definition of his belief regarding the future as he ever put on paper.

An abridged edition under another title appeared in 1701, but of the edition of 1686 not a copy could be found, until quite recently one turned up in the British Museum, which is believed to be unique. The present publication reproduces the original with great fidelity. The contents curiously resemble Bunyan's quaint attempts at verse-making and are infused with a hearty piety.

An attempt to depict the life of our Lord in narrative form. The character of the book is given in the subtitle: it is an attempt at a story, rather than a critical biography, of the Christ. Its aim is historical, not theological. A thread of fiction runs through it, but this is only used to bind together the main events in the life of Jesus as given in the gospels. There are many anecdotes interwoven of Jesus and his time.

Coming from Paris to Bordeaux and thence to Bayonne and on to Biarriz. Mr. Dix made a halt at this famous watering-place with its many memories of the Empress Eugenie. From Biarritz he made many short excursions to San Sebastia, St. Jean de Luz, Fuenterrabia, Hendage, and other adjacent places of note. At Pau again he made a stop running down to Eaux Chandes, Eaux Bonnes, Egorre, Barèges, Gavarnie, Luchon, and the many other noted resorts clustered here in the mountains. His journey ended on the Mediterranean, having taken him through the very heart of the Pyrenees. His pen does full justice to its mountain peaks, its glanciers and crags, its winding roads and gorges, and the luxurious vegetation as foliage of its valleys.

The design is to afford to the student, the artisan, the mechanic, and in fact all who are interested in science.

mechanic, and in fact all who are interested in science, whether young or advanced in years, a ready means of acquiring a general knowledge of physics by the experimental method. One of its principal purposes is, also, to furnish to the teacher suggestions in experimentation which will be helpful in making class-room work interesting and attractive, rather than dry and monotonous. Most of the apparatus illustrated and described may be constructed and used by any one having ordinary mechanical skill. Simple and easily made devices have been chosen for physical demonstration. A large proportion of the material of this work consists of original articles published from time to time in the Scientific American.

Prof. Lumholtz set out for Australia in 1880 with the object of spending four years in making collections for the museums of the University of Christiania, and in making researches into the customs, habits of life, etc., of the little known tribes that inhabit that continent. The entertaining results of his researches are detailed in a style which is at once thoroughly popular and admirably teres. The greater part of the volume is devoted to descriptions of the author's life in the camps of the northern canaibals. He presents a faithful picture, based on his own observations, of the life, manners, and customs of these savage Australian aborigines from their birth and infancy to their old age and death.

- A beautiful blue-eyed, golden-haired Berlinese, who twice becomes a widow before she marries the man she loves, is the "Countess Loreley" of the story. The scene opens in Baden-Baden, in 1870, where the heroine, then the widow of the Count von Sulzingen, is found surrounded by admirers. Her similarity to the Loreley of the legend, who only lured men to their destruction, is pictured throughout. With wonderful powers of fascination, she has little thought of marrying again, as by her husband's will she forfeits her fortune. Her strange fate and that of her many lovers is full of interest. "The story of a young Englishman of noble birth, who, to gratify the wishes of his father, marries an heiress for whom he does not care, while he is madly in love with a fascinating artist of Greek ancestry, whose acquaintance he made in Rome. He, however, resolves to be a faithful and devoted husband, and in the course of time his wife dies, and he is free to offer his hand to the object of his adoration. She does not refuse it; and we presume that they live in peace, if they do not die in Greece or some other artistic region. The story is well told, though the dialogue is finer and more scholarly than that usually heard in fashionable society,"—Beston Gasette.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

DECEMBER 21, 1880.

" Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."-LORD BACON.

OUARTO IUVENILES.

OUR friend the American Bookmaker, in an article reprinted elsewhere, presents a rather exaggerated picture as regards the prices at which juveniles in the general meaning of the term are manufactured, the prices for which they sell, and the profit that "requires nimble fingers to count." Juveniles—that is, quarto juveniles—are to-day manufactured at so small a margin that it doesn't pay to push them; they are really made to supply the cheapest kind of market—the dry-goods counter. There they sell anywhere from 25 cents to 60 cents, scarcely ever reaching the dollar line, and then only for special new volumes. competition in this line of books has been so savage in the past that a number of the larger houses are making no more than will enable them to hold their ground, which they do hoping for a change and better times. We agree with our friend the Bookmaker that the public that buys this grade of books is generally "beaten" —if it expects a $1.50 book for 25 cents. And we hope this will last so long as the perverse public will continue to patronize a class of people who make capital out of the alleged fact that they are able to give them a dollar's worth for twenty-five cents.

We also think our contemporary is too sweeping when it asserts that it "does not pay" to make an expensive "juvenile." We have reason to believe that the few houses which produce this class of books are enabled to make a living profit, and, at times, to make a "ten strike," and we are not now referring to the art books erroneously classed as juveniles. In regard to these latter we cheerfully indorse the last paragraph in the article quoted.

NOTWITHSTANDING much cheap wit to the contrary, the publishing fraternity has always distinguished itself in being open-handed, whatever its other faults might be. Witness the generosity of Gen. A. C. Barnes in donating to the Christian Association of Ithaca a valuable collection of theological works and promising to extend the | titles of this vast array of print and pictures.

gift from time to time. Also Mr. George Haven Putnam's gift to the Colorado College library of the most important scientific and classic works from the list published by his firm. How often does one hear of a farmer giving away his produce to feed the hungry, or a tradesman his goods to clothe the naked or to furnish the houses of the destitute? Yet it is quite common to expect just that from a publisher, and also quite common that he accedes to it.

AUTHORS' READINGS IN BROOKLYN.

By arrangement between the Brooklyn Library. whose course of "Lectures by Authors," including one by Chas. Dudley Warner, and two by Miss A. B. Edwards, has been a popular success. and the American [Author's] Copyright League, the final evening of the course was given to authors' readings, for the benefit of the copyright fund. The Academy of Music was well filled by an appreciative audience. Hon. Seth Low, a director of the library, presided.

President Low, in opening, disclaimed the idea of making a speech, but he did make a forcible though brief one on the injustice to American authors of forcing them to compete with books reprinted from foreign sources for merely the cost of type and paper. "The worst competition which business men have to face," he said, " is the competion of the insolvent. But we force our American authors to meet the even keener competition of absolutely unpaid labor, merely that we may enjoy the fruit of other men's brains without paying for it. How long are we going to stand in the category of nations that are not only willing but glad to take something for nothing and to keep taking? We know that the men or the people who act on that principle are poor sticks. In spite of the competition which American authors have had to meet they have built up a literature of which we are all proud. But it is time that we should do something more than applaud them. Take the question to your hearts and think of it seriously.".

After a letter from Mark Twain, satirically protesting against authors' readings in general, read by W. L. Keese, Dr. Edward Eggleston, one of the Vice-Presidents of the League, made a capital speech, and read from his "Hoosier Schoolmaster." R. W. Gilder, E. L. Bynner, Robert Grant, W. H. Gibson, F. Hopkinson Smith, and Theo. Roosevelt, also took part, and an autobiographical letter from Miss A. B. Edwards, telling" How I write my novels," was read by R. R. Bowker. The readers afterward attended a reception at the Hamilton Club.

A GLUT OF JUVENILES.

From the American Bookmaker,

COMPETENT judges are predicting a glut of juveniles when the market is a little older. Vast additions have been made to the already endless lists, so that upon entering a large bookstore at this season the eye is fairly bewildered by the countless titles, bindings, sizes, and styles, extra fine, fine, good, bad, indifferent, and very bad. No one, save the dealer himself or his expert assistants, can possibly know much more than the The question naturally arises, Why does this condition of things exist? The reply is that by hustling together a lot of ready-made electrotypes with some descriptive matter, cribbed or bought for little or nothing, a publisher can get out a tolerably good-looking book, a small quarto in illuminated boards, for 35 to 40 cents, which will retail for $1.50, and go to the trade for about $1. The sale of a single thousand will pay the maker a profit, and after that it requires nimble fingers to count the money.

By substituting a cloth case with a showy stamp in gilt, and colored inks, the book is made to attain the dignity of a $2 volume, with profit proportionately increased. In other words, there is money in this style of "juveniles," provided they are put together by skilful hands and made tolerably attractive. The books are got ready about September 1, and somewhat later the retail dealers throughout the land begin to "clear their decks for action." Their guns are double-shotted with juveniles and juveniles are stacked on all sides. The public is bombarded with them. The combat thickens as December days slip by.

When Christmas morning breaks the action is over. The public has been beaten. Many a fond parent wonders why he or she bought these two pounds of printed paper, for the children do not seem to care much for the pictures, or letterpress either. In plain English, half of these books were not worth publishing. The cuts are either old or else made over; the contents are a rehash of matters and things, shreds and patches of information picked up along the highways and byways of literature, or else translated from the French or German, or "bagged" in England and peddled out by some needy literary snips.

This may be book-making, but it is the noble art in the "lean and slippered pantaloon." A country might go on to the crack of doom making such books as here described, and yet never lift itself above dull mediocrity—that natural level of the imitator, the adapter, the "old clo" man in the industrial arts.

Book-makers of great experience will reply that "it does not pay" to make an expensive "juvenile;" that the public will not give more than $2 for such a book; that this is the standard price of the small illustrated quarto, the usual form in which such books are published; that when they are marked $2.50 they are still usually sold at $2.

To prove the correctness of this theory, attention will be directed to the failures scored by high priced juveniles, beautifully illustrated and elegantly printed on the finest paper to be had in the market. It need scarcely be added that when such failures are critically examined the reasons of non-success are almost always found to be in the poor judgment of the publisher, rather than in the cause alleged. They are not juveniles at all; they are utterly lacking in the elements necessary to attract, interest, and enchain the attention of young folks. The pictures are too old, or the subject matter is dull and spiritless. Little men and women are the most fastidious of readers. Such a book, no matter how much it costs, has no charm for them. Its place is the library and not the nursery. There the beautiful technique of the illustrator, his wonderful Dürer imitations or Doré style will be fully appreciated.

Let us then have fewer and better "juveniles," genuine and not make-believe children's books over which the old folks are alone able to get up any enthusiasm.

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT BILLS.

From Belford's Magazine (Editorial Department).

At the ensuing meeting of Congress, the question of international copyright will once more be brought before the Legislature, and presumably an attempt will be made to pass a bill more or less satisfactory to the chief parties in interest. The "Hawley Bill," it will remembered, secured copyright to the foreign author simply on terms of reciprocity, while the "Chace Bill," that superseded it, granted the right conditionally with certain manufacturing clauses, one clause being the entire prohibition of the importation of foreign manufactured books when copyrighted here.

The subject has been so thoroughly discussed by all parties that there can be no excuse for further delay. Nor can the turmoil of a Presidential campaign and a tariff debate be pleaded as a reason for not bringing the bill forward. is now admitted, also, that a copyright bill is necessary to protect the American author from competition. "The want of an international copyright," were the words of Mr. Charles Scribner, about a year ago, " is working a great injury to publishers, as the want of statutory protection tends to shut out home products through the very cheapness of the article, thus not only depriving the British author of his due but interfering with the sale of American novels. Other publishers use equally strong language. "Publishers," said another, "who go into cheap editions and 'libraries' and sell the works of foreign authors in that shape are the worst enemies of the American author. Such productions cheapen literary work, and do the greatest possible harm to the cause of literature." words indeed express the opinion of the trade. What authors think of the present condition of the law is known to everybody. Every American book is at the mercy of the English pirate. In the British dominions, French, German, and all works published by nations that are members of the International Literary Association have protection. "It is only an American book," Mr. G. W. Smalley wrote, the other day, "that is pirated in England.

It is the manufacturing clause that creates all the trouble. This clause we regard as indefensible. It is a curtailment of freedom of contract. It brings together and tries to fuse together two things utterly distinct, the productions of the brain and the products of a manufacture—the rights of the author to his work, and questions of wages. If it is the function of the Legislature to protect the manufacturer from foreign com-petition by imposing a protective tariff on im-portations—and this is what is done on every conceivable thing by the present majority is Congress—why is not the same principle applied to books? Raise the present duties on books, in sheets or bound, on stereotype plates, on everything which enters into the manufacture of a book, raise these imposts as high as the wisdom of our Senators and Congressmen may deem fit, but do so fairly and honestly by a clause in the tariff bills, not as a "rider" to a bill that is passed under "the guise of promoting literature."

The right of Congress to pass a copyright law is given it by the national Constitution, Art. L., Sec. 8, which says: "Congress shall have power to promote the progress of science and useful arts by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries." It is clear, too, that under our present want of law the progress of science and useful arts (under which terms literary productions have been reckoned since the first copyright bill in 1700) is not promoted as it would be were an international law passed. Public opinion, unfortunately, is not yet prepared to feel the weight of remarks of a French author. who, arguing against such devices as manufacturing clauses and heavy tariffs, writes: "Such a system is to impose a tax on the development of science and education; it is limiting, for paltry considerations, the horizons of those who desire to advance their intellectual culture by the knowledge of other literatures than their own." public opinion is prepared to see that our national literature is suffering from the present uncertain conditions of publishing. Publishers who have the enterprise and energy to purchase advanced sheets of English works are at the mercy of every pirate; while the "libraries" are flooding the country with their reprints of the worst as well as the best novels that can be appropriated, to the certain depravation of taste. The change to the certain depravation of taste. of one single word in the present Copyright Law would effect all that authors or publishers demand. It is a slight change—the mere substitu-tion of "person" for "citizen." This is what the "Hawley Bill" proposed, and what is wanted first and foremost, unless the nation prefers to retain its character as the only civilized country that will take the productions of an author's brain without paying for them. Then let the tarifftinkers take their turn at protecting any other interests involved.

"Copyright unhampered by any manufacturing restrictions," to quote Mr. George Haven Putnam, " is what must finally be arrived at;" and the separation of tariff and copyright legislation might facilitate the ultimate attainment of this consummation. But in the present temper of political parties, we must be content with some sort of compromise, and live in the hope that experience will teach us how to amend it. The non-importation clause of the "Chace Bill" has been truly described as a "fanciful absurdity, and would be difficult to carry out. The proposition of what has been called "free trade in printing," which means that anybody can print anything if he gives the author a royalty to be fixed by law, is repudiated by both authors and publishers, and need not be further mentioned. The fight will be on the "Chace Bill," unless the authors have made up their minds to accept any bill rather than have none at all.

It is remarkable that our government not only steadily neglects to give our own authors protection against unfair competition, but absolutely stimulates it by all means in its power. " libraries" would never have swarmed over the land without the direct aid of the post-office. The regulations of that department of government respecting second-class mail-matter and the style of literature which the present interpretation of the law allows to pass under that designation, amount, really, to a gratuitous distribu-tion of such printed matter to the direct prejudice of books that are books. It is a striking anomaly that whether a book shall be admitted to the privilege of transmission through the mails as second-class matter is a question depending on the form of the book. This is a direct discrimination against the legitimate book.

Nothing can be more absurd than an interpretation of the law that permits the Bible or a dictionary to pass through the post under the expression "newspapers or other periodical publications." It is possible that the framers of the Postal Law intended these words to cover magazines, reviews, or what may be called "monthly newspapers."

Be that as it may, the distinction ought to be abolished. The mails ought to carry at the same rate all books or none. They ought not to carry any. At present the post-office is an express-office not run on strict business principles.

DISCOUNTS TO LIBRARIES.

"THE burning question whether free libraries are to be regarded by the publishing world as wholesale or retail customers." says the London News, " will remind old bibliopoles of the great. controversy on 'Underselling,' which raged in the pages of The Westminster Review some eight and thirty years ago, and was only settled by the good offices of Lord Chief Justice Campbell. who, as the arbitrator between the partles, gave his judgment in favor of the free traders. Since then the system of allowing the purchaser a discount of twopence or threepence in the shilling has taken deep root among us, except in small towns or thinly-peopled localities, where probably nothing short of his twenty-five per cent. on the new magazines would enable the bookseller to live. In this latter case the purchaser must, as the political economists say, fulfil the conditions of supply. He might no doubt wait for an opportunity of saving twopence or threepence by buying in the nearest large town; but as a rule he finds that the local bookseller saves him time and trouble, and deserves his reward. The faint echo of the old dispute comes in a more specious guise. Local booksellers, we are told, who 'have to contribute their quota to these institutions, protest that the free libraries ought to get their books through them, and presumptively at a somewhat higher rate than that at which the publishers supply directly. Unluckily for them, their brother ratepayers who do not happen to be booksellers, and yet are 'contributing their quota to these institutions, protest the other way.

THE RETIREMENT OF E. F. BEADLE.

WE doubt whether there are many Americans, who were boys thirty or forty years ago, who have not stowed away somewhere in their memories fond recollections of a course of reading bound in orange-colored paper covers popularly known as Beadle's Dime Novels, The preacher and reformer of that day inveighed against the series as the "root of all evil." Parents, fearful of the morals and virtues of their dear ones, issued fiats and pronunciamentos against its introduction to the hallowed precincts of the fireside, and visited with dire punishment the transgress ors. But who will quench the fire of a youth aflame with a desire for knowledge good or bad? There were other places than the home—as there always will be-where the boys could indulge themselves in the luxury of tasting of the forbidden fruit. And what innocuous poison it all was! Whether it was "Single Eye," "Outward Bound," or "Jabez Hawk, the Yankee Spy," didn't they all begin and end alike? Wasn't the villain worsted in the end and poor hunted and downtrodden virtue raised up to a high place and honored out of all proportion to its merits? And didn't it all pall on its readers and cause themthose who were in New York at least-to gather up after a while their treasures into a little bundle. and, without a pang of remorse, dispose of them to the Ann Street dealers for a cent or two the volume, or for a book or two, worth most likely, from a literary point of view, three times as much as the whole litter of yellow-covered stuff? The writer has always been and still is of the opinion that this and kindred series never did as much harm as is claimed, and in some cases it was the means of starting boys to read, who, had they been confined to the literary pabulum advocated and prescribed by the literary circles of to-day, would probably never have developed the taste for reading that they did. Boys will be boys: and as not one boy in five hundred who steals apples will develop into a thief, so every healthy boy will outgrow in good time the stuff he begins with to read.

We write this apropos of the retirement of Mr. E. F. Beadle, the senior member of the firm of Beadle & Adams, after fifty years of active life. May it comfort him to know that he did considerably more good in an humble way, and a great deal less harm, than he generally was credited with. Mr. Beadle began his apprenticeship in the book business of H. & E. Phinney, school-book publishers and booksellers of Cooperstown, N.Y. In 1847 he moved to Buffalo, where he went into the book business on his own account. In 1852 he began the publication of The Youth's Casket for young people, and four years later he strove to teach the older readers through The Home. In 1859 he removed to New York City and with his brother began the issue of the series through which his name became so well known in his day. He subsequently formed the firm of Beadle & Adams, the sole remaining partner of which is now Mr. William Adams.

OBITUARY.

AUGUST F. SIEMON.

A. F. SIEMON, founder of the old and widelyknown house of Siemon & Brother, dealers in books and stationery, died at his home in Fort Wayne, Indiana, on Thursday, December 12. Mr. Siemon was born in Saxony, Germany, at the city of Ziesar, September 18, 1821. His father, August Ferdinand Siemon, a native of Saxony, was a prominent man, a merchant at Ziesar and postmaster and mayor of the city for a number of years. He died about 1860. His wife, whose maiden name was Caroline Grams, died in 1821, eight days after the birth of her son. Mr. Siemon received a good education in his native town, completing it at the college of Brandenburg. In 1849 he came to America, and travelled directly to Fort Wayne, intending to study at Concordia College. After an attendance there of about a year, he entered the employ of Towley & Freeman as a clerk, and subsequently held similar positions with W. T. Abbott and Towley & Brother. He founded his present business in 1858, and in 1861 admitted his brother Rudolph as a partner, when the firm became known as Siemon & Bro. In 1885 the interest of Rudolph was transferred to Mr. A. F. Siemon, and the two sons Henry and Herman were admitted as partners.

At their present place of business, 50 Calhoun Street, they have one of the most commodious store-rooms in the city, occupying the entire four floors of the building, which is in dimensions 20x 170 feet, and they carry a complete stock of books, stationery, wall-paper, pictures and frames, doing an annual average business of $50,000 to $60,000.

Mr. Siemon was one of the prominent men of Fort Wayne, a veteran in business, and highly esteemed in all his relations with society. The funeral took place Sunday, December 15, from St. Paul's Lutheran Church, of which Mr. Siemon was a trustee and devoted member.

BENJAMIN G. SMITH, who has been connected with the Frank Leslie publications since 1866. died on Monday, December 16, from capillary bronchitis contracted during the blizzard of March, 1888, when he walked from his home at 113 Sixth Ave., Brooklyn, to his office and back Mr. Smith was born at Mansfield, in Nottinghamshire, England, in 1815. He was apprenticed to a printer when very young, and gave much of his time to the invention of a universal language and a system of shorthand. In 1846 Mr. Smith came to the United States and first went West. In 1866 he published with Dr. Tower a history entitled "The Great Civil War," and in the same year came into Frank Leslie's publishing house, where for years he had the superistendence of manuscripts. His duties brought him a wide aquaintance among the literary mea of New York and workers on the daily press. and his conversation was instructive and charming. Mr. Smith would have celebrated his golden wedding-day in June next. Swedenborgian, and his book entitled "Over the Border," and expounding doctrines of a future life peculiar to this denomination, has just been issued.

OLIVER R. KINGSBURY, until recently Treasurer of the American Tract Society, died at his home, 239 West 54th Street, New York City, on Wednesday December 11, aged 80 years Rev. Dr. M. A. Hallock, founder of the Tract Society, in 1825 engaged Mr. Kingsbury when a lad of eighteen to light fires, sweep the floor, and make himself generally useful. In 1834, just seven years after he began his apprenticeship, he was elected Assistant Secretary of the association. A year later, at the age of twenty-five, the Assistant Treasurership was added to his duties. Although the formal title of Treasurer was not adopted by the Tract Society until 1870, Mr. Kingsbury was its chief financial officer until 1887, when old age forced him to decline a re-At its annual meeting in May of that election. year the Society passed resolutions which were a well-deserved tribute to his long and faithful service.

During the sixty years of Mr. Kingsbury's service there passed through the Treasury nearly $20,000,000, and not a dollar was lost during his connection with that department. During those sixty years, too, he had been out of the office only once, from illness, for any length of time. His annual vacation was never longer than a week. The Society, as a token of its estimation of Mr. Kingsbury's services, had conferred upon him the title of Treasurer Emeritus.

EDWARD BRADLEY, more commonly known by his pen-name of Cuthbert Bede, died in London, Thursday, December 12. He was a favorite contributor to English periodicals.

FRANK H. CONVERSE died at Walden, Mass. on Friday, December 13, from a complication of diseases. He wrote for many magazines and papers, and was specially happy as a writer for young people.

MRS. DANIEL S. APPLETON, wife of Daniel S. Appleton, of D. Appleton & Co., died suddenly on Sunday, December 15, of apoplexy, at the family residence, 3 University Place, New York City. Mrs. Appleton was a Miss Lincoln, of Providence, and was closely related to the family of Prof. Lincoln, of Brown University. She was an aunt of Col. Daniel Appleton, of the Seventh Regiment, and of H. Seymour Geary, of West Thirty-fifth Street.

A. L. LUYSTER, bookseller, of 98 Nassau St., N. Y., and 10 Silver St., London, died on the 18th inst. at London, aged forty-five years. He was for a number of years in the bookstore of T. W. Reeve at 138 Fulton Street, and in 1866 succeeded to his business. In 1867 he went to London as resident buyer, and with the exception of two or three visits, has resided continuously in London since that time. The business will be continued by his brother, Mr. S. B. Luyster, who has had charge of the New York branch for some years.

THE friends of Mr. Joseph Vogelius, of Messrs. Henry Holt & Co., will sympathize with him in the loss of his wife, who died at Bloomfield, New Jersey, on Saturday, December 14,

WHERE TO MAKE PUBLISHING PAY.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16, 1880.

To the Editor of the Publishers' Weekly:

SIR: In your admirable article of the 14th inst. on "How to Make Publishing Pay," you left out one important direction, viz.:

Begin business in any country where books are used whose laws will enable you to publish a line of books stolen from their authors.
Your obedient servant,

FAIR PLAY.

IOURNALISTIC NOTES.

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S Sons have adopted a clever scheme for advertising their Scribner's Magasine effectively, yet unobtrusively, by printing on the outside of the flap of envelopes, which they furnish with imprint to dealers throughout the country, in fac-simile handwriting, Have you seen the last number of Scribner's Magazine?

Galignani's Messenger, according to an Associated Press despatch, has changed hands, having been bought by a newly formed newspaper company. The same company has bought several other Anglo-American papers published on the Continent, and will consolidate them all so as to make a good subscription list for one paper to be called The Weekly International Times, of which Leopold Grahame will be the editor.

MISS AMELIA B. EDWARDS will publish a very striking article in the January Century, in which is given the first popular description of the recent extraordinary discoveries in Bubastis, Egypt. It is stated that all the monuments produced in this number are now published for the first time. One of the stones of these ruins is almost sixty-one centuries old. Bubastis, as old as the world itself, was considered as passing away when Olympia rose.

CERTAIN newspapers are announcing a series of articles on the Civil War, by Lord Wolseley, which it is said "will appear in an American magazine." They have appeared. They were begun in the May number of the North American Review, and are concluded in the December number of that periodical. More than this, they have been comprehensively reviewed by Gen. lames B. Fry, in the same magazine, and have been noticed by almost every paper in the coun-

The Old and New Testament Student, a monthly publication, and Hebraica, a quarterly, edited by Prof. W. R. Harper, of Yale University, will be transfered January 1 by the C. Venton Patterson Publishing Company, of New York (which company has published this journal during the past year), to the Student Publishing Company, of New York and Hartford, a company organized for the special purpose of carrying on the work. The business manager will be C. H. Piddock, of Hartford. Prof. Harper states that the circulation of both journals is much larger than ever before. The meaning of the change, says the Times, is that Prof. Harper has again largely assumed the responsibility of the publications.

THE Critic announces that, with the new year, Dr. W. J. Rolfe, of Cambridgeport, Mass., the distinguished Shakespearian scholar, will take charge of a department in that paper to be en-titled "Shakespeariana." In this department he will review new editions of Shakespeare's works. together with new publications relating to those works and their author, and will answer any questions concerning them that show an intelligent interest in the subject on the part of the inquirer. The study of Shakespeare has assumed such proportions, nowadays, as to demand special treatment in literary journals of a serious character. Dr. Rolfe will edit the Shakespearian department of no other periodical while he has charge of the one to be opened next month in the Critic.

The Ladies' Home Journal (Curtis Publishing Co., 433 Arch Street, Philadelphia) issues a most promising prospectus for 1890. Half a million copies of this domestic periodical carry to many homes a vast amount of useful and ornamental information, as well as of entertaining literature, Among the names on the programme for next year we briefly mention Marion Harland, Maud Howe, Mrs. Whitney, Annie Sheldon Coombes, Mrs. John Sherwood, Mrs. Alexander, Mary J. Holmes, Robert J. Burdette, and T. De Witt Talmage, who will begin a regular department in which he will talk on all subjects of interest to women in their private, business, and social lives. The paper will also include a young people's department. The Ladies' Home Journal is too well known to need commendation, but we gladly call attention to its arrangements for 1880 under its experienced editor, Edward W. Bok.

WITH the first number of the new volume, the fifth of the new series, published on Saturday, December 7, The Studio began its weekly issue. The number published on the first Saturday of each month will contain from three to five fullpage supplements consisting of etchings, photogravures, photo-etchings, photo-engravings, etc., The numbers of The Studio to be published on the succeeding Saturdays of the month will consist of eight pages, but will be increased to twelve as occasion arises. This issue of The Studio will not be illustrated. All the issues of this journal will be printed on the same size page, with paper of the same quality, but in smaller type, except the headings, which will be uniform in all the numbers. The weekly issue is intended to be a chronicle as complete as the publishers can make it, of all the minor art matters of the country, and of as much as is possible to get hold of, of what is going on abroad in each week. This chronicle will consist of announcements of art exhibitions, present and to come, reports of sales, items of news, short book notices: whatever, in short, is of current interest and importance in the world of art. This venture must, we are certain, commend itself to the art public, to connoisseurs, amateurs, and to artists, instructors in art, to art clubs, schools and art institutions. It will, as heretofore, be edited by Clarence Cook, and published by Jos. J. Koch, 864 Broadway, N. Y.

About two years ago a monthly periodical in the German language, known as the Deutsch-Americanische Dichtung, was established by Konrad Nies and Hermann Rosenthal. monthly has been continued up to the present time, but with varying success. Most of the contributions were voluntary and not paid for. and while some prose matter appeared, it was much easier to get poetry. As a consequence, the magazine lacked those features of general interest which are to be found in the great American monthlies. Last June some of the German citizens of New York City, who had appreciated the enterprise of Messrs. Nies and Rosenthal, concluded to form a society to see that their undertaking should be made permanent. The Verein für Deutsche Literatur und Kunst in Amerika was formed, and on the 14th inst. articles of incorporation were filed in the office of the Secretary of State at Albany. The incorporators are Julius Fuchs, Dr. Emanuel Baruch, Paul Saupe, F. Michel, William Strauss, and George J. Edelheim, of New York; George Juraschek and John Friedrich, of Brooklyn, and Messrs. Nies and Rosenthal, the original publishers and editors of the periodical. We wish this magazine better success than its worthy predecessors have enjoyed. One of the oldest and best edited German journals, the Belletristische Journal, has a hard time of it at the best.

HUMORS OF THE TRADE.

A DRUMMER who was trying to sell a book called "Sermon on the Mount" to a rising Western bibliophile was knocked speechless by the latter asking him who the author was.

RIVALRY.—Copy of "Ben-Hur" in circulating library (patronizingly)—"Hello, Faunt! Got a little of the shine worn off you, I see."

Copy of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" (sharply)—
"A little, hey? I'll be jiggered if I ain't about as shabby and dirty as you dare be!"—Chicago Tribune.

The Iowa State Register has discovered a new volume among the works of Hawthorne, as the following extract from its columns shows: "Moses from an Old Mouse" is a pretty story, written by Nathaniel Hawthorne and published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co, of Boston and New York. It is a large volumne, and is very interesting, as are all of the works of this noted author."

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE American branch of Raphael Tuck & Sons will celebrate its fifth anniversary by giving a ball at Webster Hall, in New York, on the 27th inst. Mr. S. Gabriel is making the arrangements, and a good time may be looked forward CONTRACTS for the official printing of the State of New York were awarded by the State officers as follows: The session laws of 1890, to Banks & Brothers, of this city; the Court of Appeals reports, for three years, to J. B. Lyon, of Albany.

GREENOUGH, HOPKINS & CUSHING, 168 Devonshire St., Boston, have published a tasteful and well-selected "Author's Calendar." It is printed on fine card-board sheets, tied with a silk cord, and artistically decorated. It retails

RABBI SCHINDLER, of the Temple Adath Israel, Boston, has published a little volume entitled "Israelites in Boston," a tale describing the developments of Judaism in Boston, preceded by the Jewish calendar for the next decade. The proceeds from the sale are to go to the treasury of the Home for the Aged and Infirm Hebrews of Boston.

THE J. G. CUPPLES Co. will publish shortly a new edition of "Aunt Nabby—her rambles, her adventures, and her notions," a work in the vein of the "Widow Bedott Papers." They will also shortly publish a bright volume of Europeaa travel, entitled "A Bundle of Letters from Over the Sea," by Louise B. Robinson, well known in artistic and social circles of Boston.

JUDGE JAMIESON, of the Chicago Circuit Court, on December 16, decided that the Regan printing house had no right to publish a book entitled "The Great Cronin Mystery, or, the Irish patriot's fate," the title having been first used in a publication of the same character by Laird & Lee, who sought an injunction against the Regan company. The latter demurred on the ground that Laird & Lee had not copyrighted, but the court overruled the demurrer.

THOMAS S. TOWNSEND recently exhibited his valuable library of transcripts and excerpts from newspapers and periodicals, and from national, State, and biographical records, forming a history of the late civil war from 1860 to 1868, at the Columbia College, with a view to its possible purchase by the college. It cost Mr. Townsend almost twenty-eight years of labor and $25,000 in money to gather this material, which comprises 100 volumes, and contains 60,000 pages. The compiler places the value of the collection at $45,000, and among the men who have testified to its worth were Gen. Grant, Gen. Seymour, Gen. Beauregard, William Cullen Bryant, and the Comte de Paris. In the last Congress Senstor Hawley introduced a bill for the purchase of the library.

THE ALBANY BOOK COMPANY, 36 State St., Albany, N. Y., will publish January 10, 1890. "An Experiment in Marriage," by Charles J. Bellamy, the brother of Edward Bellamy, anthor of "Looking Backward." Charles J. Bellamy has previously given several novels to the public, "The Breton Mills," published ten years since, having been especially well received. The forthcoming volume describes an imaginary Western valley, colonized by several thousand social reformers; they not only have new industrial institutions, but have ventured on an experiment in marriage. The story opens in New York. The two leading characters meet the agent of the colony at their club and arrange to return with him for a two years' trial of life under such changed conditions. They find women as independent as men, children taken care of by the State, and the marriage bond regarded as only in force while the married pair continue to love each other. Failure of affection is followed by a record of divorce, and both partners can marry again. book is likely to make a great sensation.

E. & F. N. Spon have in preparation a work on "Pumps, historically, theoretically and practically considered," by P. R. Bjorling; "Notes on Permanent Way Material, plate-laying, and points and crossings," by W. H. Cole; a revised and enlarged edition of J. H. Cotterill's "Theory of the Steam-Engine considered as a heat engine;" "A Second Course of Mechanical Drawing - mechanical graphics," arranged for use in technical and science and art institutes, schools and colleges, by George Halliday; "Liquid Fuel for mechanical and industrial purposes, by E. A. B. Hodgetts; a revised edition of Cantain V. Hosklær's manual on "Testing Tele-graph Cables;" "Waterways and Water Transport in different countries: with a description of the Panama, Suez, Manchester, Nicaraguan, and other canals," by J. S. Jeans; "The Marine Transport of Petroleum," a book intended for the use of shipowners, underwriters, merchant captains, and officers of petroleum-carrying vessels, by G. H. Little; and "Gas and Petroleum Engines," a practical treatise on the internal combustion engine, by W. Robinson.

THE "Pilgrim's Progress" has been translated into Amharic, the language of Abyssinia. book has now been translated into eighty-four languages.

GEORGE ALLEN, of Orpington, Eng., will publish early in the new year a cheap edition of Mr. Ruskin's "Seven Lamps of Architecture." size will be post octavo, and 250 copies will be issued on hand-made paper with plates on India

LORD TENNYSON'S new volume, "Demeter, and other poems," is published. All the poems One is dedicated to James Russell are short. Lowell. All criticism thus far seems to be unanimous in the verdict that many of the poems are equal to any of the poet's former efforts.

JOHN MURRAY, London, will publish an English edition of "Memories of a Southern Planter (Colin Dabny), by his daughter, Mrs. Smedes, of Baltimore. The book was reviewed in the Baltimore. Nineteenth Century by Mr. Gladstone, who has also consented to write a prefatory letter for the English edition of the book.

THE first volume of B. F. Stevens' "Facsimiles of Manuscripts of European Archives Re-lating to America, 1773-1783," is now ready for delivery to subscribers. The second volume is far advanced, and the third, fourth, and fifth volumes are in active preparation. The subscription price is $100 for each group of five Two hundred copies only are made, volumes. and the photographic negatives are destroyed. A specimen copy of the first volume may be seen at the office of Tice & Lynch, 341/2 Pine St., New York.

The Following are Some of the Opinions of the Trade and Press:

"For the time that we have devoted to its examination, are well pleased with it."—ROBERT CLARKE & Co., Publishers and Booksellers, Cincinnati.

"You deserve well of the world till you die, and after, but the book trade is just as ungrateful as any republic, and although they may sling an occasional laurel wreath out your way, the silver buzzard and the golden eagle 'flieth not so fast nor so far.' There is but one Directory of the Book and Stationery Trade and that is Caspar's."—P. F. VAN EVEREN, New York.

"It is just splendid. The most complete book of the kind we have seen."-J. H. Kurzenknabe & Sons, Harisburg, Pa.

"I am greatly pleased with your Directory. It is the best work of the kind ever issued and deserves a large sale,"—NATURAL SCIENCE PUBLISHING CO., New York.

"It seems more complete than anything of the kind I have seen before."—J. B. Martindals, Chicago.

"We like it very much, and we don't know but what it is the best thing of the kind we have ever seen."—P. R. McCargo & Co., Boston.

"Am very grateful to you for the conscientious care and painstaking effort in preparing so valuable and so complete a work. Be kind enough to enter my name, and mail me all addenda sheets in future, and do not fail to notify me of any new project in this line you may engage in."—Gro. H. Colby, Bookseller, Lancaster, N. H.

"We have looked it over with great interest and appreciate the fact that it will be of great value to us."—W.

O. Davib & Co., Booksellers, Cincinnati.

"I think your book a most valuable one and believed will be better appreciated as it becomes better known."—WILL H. LYONS, Newport, Ky.

"Even a cursory examination of this important directory will convince any one of the thorough manner in which it has been put together and of the value of the completed work. Mr. Caspar has produced a work which, if properly kept up from year to year, will be the standard."—The American Stationer, New York City.

"The Appendix to Caspar's Directory of the American Book, News, and Stationery Trades' is a most valuable compilation, exhaustive and complete. The information it contains is absolutely unique and not to be procured from any other source. Hence it is of the first importance to every one in the trades. It is admirably arranged: the references are simple, and being grouped under special heads, makes consultation a matter of little or no difficulty. Such a work is really a great trade textbook, from which the initiated can feel the pulse of the whole book-publishing world. It is a monument of careful, painstaking and accurate labor, and is as reliable as it is extensive. . . . The preparation of this useful volume must have been a work of immense labor and patience, and Mr. Caspar must be congratulated on the success which he has achieved. It is a manual for poblishers, booksellers, newsdeales, stationers, and libraries, indispensable to them all."—The American Bookseller.

One volume, large 8vo, 1450 pages, bound in half black cowhide, $12 net.

For the convenience of those who send out Travelling Agents, the publisher has had the Geographical Part bound separately in a handy shape, at $13 for the two volumes. These volumes will not be sold separately.

The Book of the Season.

GREAT SENATORS OF THE UNITED STATES Forty Years Ago (1848 and 1849), with Personal Recollections and Delineations of Calhoun, Benton, Clay, Webster, General Houston, Jefferson Davis, etc. By OLIVER DVRR. Robert Bonner's Sons, Publishers, St.oo.

"Great Senators" is emphatically the book of the season. The critics and reviewers give it unstinted praise. The New York Tribuns concludes a two-column review of it thus:

"This book will be read with the keenest pleasure by all who are old enough to have been brought up in the traditions of half a century ago, while it can be com-mended to young men as a treasure-house of information concerning perhaps the most striking and able group of statesmen the Union has known."

The New York Times savs :

"Mr. Dyer's relation with the great Senators of forty years ago was one very fortunate for the acquiring of fresh impressions. It is impossible to read his reminiscences without being aware that the impressions he reports are genuine."

The New York Sun says:

" Among the recent contributions to American history

"Among the recent contributions to American history none is worthy of more serious attention than a volume entitled 'Great Senators,' by Oliver Dyer.

"It would be easy to fill columns with effective extracts from this volume, but we must confine ourselves to two or three examples of incisive and impartial delineation. Mr. Dyer's analysis of Webster's individuality is the most searching that we have seen—indeed, it is the only one which accounts at once for the triumphs and the shortcomings of the great parliamentary champion of the Ilinon." the Union.

The New York Press says:

"In the book, 'Great Senators of the United States Forty Years Ago,' are told, as Dyer only could tell, stories of Calhoun, Benton, Clay, Webster, Houston, and Jeff Davis, with personal recollections and delineations. The personal descriptions given by Dyer of these great men are photographic in precision and lifelike as touched up by the anecdotal stroke of a master."

"Great Senators" is supplied to the trade by Robert Bonner's Sons. Any one who does not find "Great Senators" at the bookstores can obtain a copy, postage paid, by sending a dollar to

THE HAVEMEYER LIBRARY.

Important to Collectors of Rare and Choice Books.

J. W. Bouton has the pleasure to announce that he has now on exhibition and sale, at 1152 Broadway, the extensive and valuable library of a gentleman of well-known taste and culture, who has devoted many years and a large expenditure of money in its formation. The collection The collection is one of unusual excellence and interest. It is seldom, indeed, that a library so perfect in the essentials requisite for a gentleman is placed at the disposal of the public. In the number and range of desirable books, in the choice of editions, in the careful selection of copies, the judicious and often costly bindings, and the perfect condition of the whole, it has seldom been equalled. The library is particularly strong in standard authors and the various departments of the Fine Arts, and comprises all the most notable Art Publications, both old and new; galleries and collections of prints, etchings, drawings, and standard treatises in English, French, and German-all being in the finest possible condition, a considerable number of which could not easily be duplicated, while others are absolutely unique. The prices at which the books are marked are very reasonable, in many cases from 25 to 50 per cent. below their original cost, with the object of inducing a speedy sale.

PUBLISHERS' TRADE LIST ANNUAL

For 1889 (Seventeenth Year).

Large 8vo, about 3000 pages. With Duplex Index. Cloth, net, $2.00.

The Trade List Annual for 1889 contains:

- The latest Catalogues of American Publishers, contributed by themselves and arranged alphabetically by the firm-names and smaller lists at the end of the volume.
- 2. A complete list by author, title, and subject of all books recorded in the Publishers' Weekly from January to June, 1889, supplementing the Annual Catalogue, 1888.
- 3. The "EDUCATIONAL CATALOGUE" for 1889, which is used by the entire trade and educational interests as the most representative reference-list of School-books.

The above Lists, all bound in one volume, present in their combination so convenient and time-saving a working-tool as to make it indispensable to every one who has any interest in the purchase or sale of books.

The patent "DUPLEX INDEX" having given such general satisfaction, we are now applying it to all copies of the "Annual." Volumes supplied with the "DUPLEX INDEX" have the alphabet printed on the concave surface as well as on the margin of the page, which enables instantaneous reference, whether the book is open or shut.

Unless special shipping directions are received, copies will be despatched by express unpaid. Parties so desiring can have their copies sent by mail, or by prepaid book-rate express for 80 cents per copy extra.

NOTES IN SEASON.

D. APPLETON & Co. have ready the third edition of David A. Wells' "Recent Economic Changes; the second edition of "The Ice Age of North America," by G. Frederick Wright; and new editions, brought down to date, of "California of the South," by Lindley and Widney; "The Florida of To-Day," by J. W. Davidson; and of the Handbook of American Wilson Davidson. " Handbook of American Winter Resorts."

18 H)Y. CROWELL & Co. announce for speedy publication two important translations-M. Anatole France's charming story, " Le Crime de Sylvestre Bounard," which has already gone through ten editions in the original, and Mr. Nathan Haskell Dole's authorized translation of Señor Don Armando Palacio Valdes' latest and most successful novel, "La Hermana San Salpicio."

THE OPEN COURT PUBLISHING Co., of Chicago, announces the immediate appearance of the authorized translation of M. Th. Ribot's "Psychology of Attention." The monograph of M. Ribot, who is now Professor of Experimental and Comparative Psychology at the Collège de France, and editor of the Revue Philosophique, has been characterized by a prominent French critic as the most important production of the French philosophical press for the present year.

DODD, MEAD & Co. make the important announcement that they will hereafter publish "The History of the United States," by James Schouler, heretofore published by W.H. Morrison. of Washington. This is one of the best concise histories of our country, though for some reason it has never become as widely known as it deserved—indeed, to many it will seem to be an entirely new work. It is now in four volumes, we believe, though another and concluding one is in preparation or nearly written. Dodd, Mead & Co. will publish a new edition early next year.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish on January I "The Discovery of the Ancient City of Norumbega," by Prof. E. N. Horsford, an historical address communicated to the President and Council of the American Geographical Society at a special session in Watertown, on the 21st of November last. The brochure will have photographs of the ancient city, sixteen maps from Icelandic sources, and also the poem delivered at Watertown by Mr. E. H. Clements, of the Boston Transcript, entitled "The Poem of Vinland." The address will also be published separately in paper.

IOURNALISTIC NOTES.

WALTER BESANT'S new serial story, with the romantic title, "Armorel of Lyonesse," will begin in the number of Harper's Basar to be published January 3.

Every Other Week is heralded to make its appearance the first of the new year. It will be published simultaneously in New York, Chicago, and St. Louis. It is confident that in a short time it will have no rivals. We are afraid that will be its fate.

JEFFERSON DAVIS' article on Andersonville, which the Confederate leader is said to have withdrawn from the North American Review because its editor insisted on certain changes, will appear in Belford's Magasine. The Belford Company will also publish Mr. Davis' "Short History of the Confederate States."

MAYOR GRANT, of New York, will figure in a poem entitled "Hughey," by Derrick Dodd, to be published in Harper's Young People December 31. The poem describes a singular call upon the Mayor. Another call—"A New Year's Call" will be the subject of a story by Nora Perry in the same number.

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. c. after the date indicates that the book is copyrighted; if the copyright date differs from the imprint date, the year of copyright is added. Books of foreign origin of which the edition (amotated, illustrated, etc.) is entered as copyright, are marked c. ed.; translations, c. tr.: n.p. in place of price, indicates that the publisher makes no price, either net or retail, and quotes prices to the tradeonly upon application.

The history of Utah is the history of Mormonism. The origin of this peculiar people, the rise and progress of their peculiar doctrines, are related in this volume with more fulness and fairness than probably by any previous writer. Following the plan adopted from the first in his historical series, Mr. Bancroft has given serious consideration to both sides of the question. The story as told in the text is from the Mormon standpoint, and based entirely upon Mormon authorities, while in the notes, running side by side with the subject-matter in the text, is given in full all the anti-Mormon arguments and counter-statements. The story is rich in light and shade—in moving incidents, intolerance, crume, persecution, lawlessness; and deeds of vengeance. In the estimate of Brigham Young's character, it will surprise readers to find he is not set down either as a knave or a hypocrine—"if a bad man, he was still a great man, and the evil that nnd he is not set down either as a knave or a hypocrate—
"if a bad man, he was still a great man, and the evil that he did was done with an honest purpose." Chapters are devoted to the commerce, agriculture, stock-raising, manufactures, and mining of Utah, also to its political, educational, and social institutions. 27 pages of author-

Margaret and Amy Strong are not only left orphans, but cast penniless upon the world through the dishonesty of their uncle, Pierre Strong. The accumulation of misfortunes almost breaks Margaret's heart, and for a time she rejects all comfort. But the fact that she must work is her best tonic, and she rises "superior to circum-taseces." Her method of keeping herself and her sister is full of suggestions.

 Largely made up of editorial articles which have appeared in the Christian Leader. Their original aim was to give a few brief statements touching certain fundamental matters involved in current Biblical criticism. The discussion reached an extent which far exceeded expectation. As now given in book-form the articles are helpful, practical, and popular.

As a record of a journey under conditions utterly strange to most English readers, this volume has claims to special attention. Other adventurous spirits have crossed Russia in the summer-time, but Mr. Gowing was among the first to attempt this perilous journey in the winter. His account of the various towns be passes through and the details of the incidents of the journey are described with a pleasant humor and much graphic power.

 This story is written to show how useful among their own heathen brethren and sisters the Christian people of the land may be. The story was originally written for Zenána women, and the present is a translation of the author's original thoughts. At the end is a small collection of prayers to be used in conducting missionary working parties. Gives an excellent picture of Indian life. The author is connected with St. Catherine's Hospital, Amritsar, Paniéh, India. Amritsar, Panjáb, India.

- Tosen, Henrik. The doll's house; a play; from the Norwegian by Henrietta Frances Lord. N. Y., Appleton, 1889. 148 p. D. hf. cl., 50 c. Ibsen's plays have all been written with a purpose. In this one he aims to shed a clearer light upon the problem of marriage. The unhappiness which arises from the want of community of thought and the absence of mutual trust and responsibility is illustrated in the lives of the Helmers. Nora is (apparently) only a beautiful "doll," whose mission in life, she has been instructed, is to dance and sing and otherwise act for the gratification of the exquisite sesthetic senses of her husband. The non-development of her moral faculties leads her to see no crime in forging her father's name, to raise money to take her husband to Italy when supposed to be dying of an incurable disease. Her husband's action upon discovering her miserable secret awakens in her a second self, heretofore unsuspected. He first casts upon her the full measure of his scorn and twits her with inheriting from a dishonest father his worst traits; but when the fear of public exposure has past, Helmer is ready to forget his "doll's" moral obliquity and again worship her grace and beauty. Nora decides her life and her marriage are failures, and leaves her husband and children.

 With his well-known poetic fire the author describes beautiful women, fine horses, magnificent gardens, and the perfume of flowers. He calls on his readers "to mount with me my broad-chested horse with flying mane and tail, and I will be their guide over plains carpeted with flowers, across solitary deserts of iris and daffodils; I will conduct them under the fierce sun into the very depths of this immemorial country, and will show them the dead cities there, whose requiem is the murmur of unceasing prayers." Although dedicated to the French Minister to Morocco, a personal friend, the book does not deal with politics, but is wholly descriptive.

 A novel with a purpose. The author aims to raise the standard of physical and intellectual man by the establishment of a new race founded at the outset by careful selection of two individuals. Many subjects of nuch interest to the theorists of the hour are introduced, such as the doctrine of reincarnation, Reoteric Buddhism, even the occult knowledge acquired by the Kabbalists. The author insists it rests with ourselves to choose our associates and to be transformed into the likeness of those below or above us.

Wright, Julia McNair. Rag Fair and May Fair; the story of "me and Benje." Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., [1889.] c. 302 p. S. cl., $1.15.

The story aims to prove that people can make something of themselves in spite of great disadvantages. The scene at first is East London, where Benje and Richard are thrown on the world by the death of their drunken mother. They meet with great kindness from a young girl snake-charmer and from several others. Richard turns out a successful man, marries the girl of his choice, a trained nurse, and together they work hard to benefit just such waifs as they were in their childhood.

The scene of the story is laid in England, the opening chapters being devoted to the history of a miserable marriage—a Russian girl being sold to an Englishman to pay her father's gaming debts. She is finally murdered by her husband, who also dies suddenly and alone. The new heir of White Friars Abbey, alyoung unmarried man, takes up his residence there with the shadow of this history hanging over the place. He has a remarkable experience, in which two spirits from the other world play a part

Che Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

DECEMBER 28, 1880.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for the views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter, whether for the reading-matter columns or our advertising pages, should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same

In case of business changes, notification or card should be immediately sent to this office for entry under "Business Notes." New catalogues issued will also be mentioned when forwarded.

week's issue

Publishers are requested to furnish title-page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each book published should be forwarded, to insure correctness in the final entry.

"Every man is a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help thereunto."—LORD BACON.

In endeavoring as usual to complete within the year 1880 the record of books actually published or imported in editions into this country, we find that a good many of our friends have failed during the year to send us titles which now come pouring in upon us at the last moment in response to our final inquiry. They are, to be sure, largely odds and ends of books of the less important sort, of which not large editions were published or imported. While these are not those most often called for in bookstores, they are nevertheless the hardest to find when called for, so that the publisher should in his own interest endeavor to have such books promptly recorded. Some of the English houses have been specially remiss in this respect, and it is of just such books that the bookseller has so much difficulty in finding trace. When such titles are sent us by the dozen at the very end of the year, it is most difficult to have them properly entered, and still more, properly carried into our yearly indexes and into our "Annual Catalogue" within the few days left to us. For the sake of the publishers concerned, of the bookselling trade, and if we may also add, of this office, we trust that our friends through 1800 will take every pains possible to keep us promptly and fully informed of their issues each week. Our records show more and more books, and our machinery for obtaining information and making record becomes more perfect-yet there is still margin for greater perfection. It is our pride to present the most complete bibliographical system in the world, but we cannot maintain and perfect that reputation without the assistance of every member of the publishing trade,

WITH the new year we shall be sending out to our publishing friends a similar appeal to them to give us any information that may be lacking for the new volume of the "American Catalogue." which has now been in process of editing for some months, although the period which it covers will not be concluded until the middle of next year. We have kept at this office, from the date of the last catalogue, a careful record arranged by publishers of all books recorded; and to those publishers who are willing to give us the name of some one person in their house who will be responsible for the return of this list with any gaps filled, we are proposing to send their part of the list for verification. We mention the matter now because what we have said already as to our annual list is still more important in regard to this final entry in the "American Catalogue."

IT is not easy to tell how the year has turned out in the book trade until the Christmas rush is over, as for the time being the retail stores and the retail branches of the publishing houses are crowded with customers and everything seems to be booming. So far as can be indicated now, the year has been neither a particularly bad one nor a particularly good one, in all kinds of business and in the specialty of book trade. There have been rather more than the usual number of failures and much business demoralization; on the other hand. the volume of business has been fairly large, though the profits have been small. It will be interesting to see how the accounts foot up after the yearly stock-taking which comes in most cases with lanuary 1.

THE other day a friend happened in to ask what books to buy for his boy. We gave him such suggestions in the way of titles as we could, and then he said, "I am going over to Philadelphia to-morrow, and I suppose the best thing I can do is to go into Wanamaker's and buy there." This incident shows how widespread is the demoralization caused by underselling at specific points. The books upon which he decided were probably not in stock there, for they were standard books of permanent value such as the "department" bookstores do not usually keep on hand, but which they are ready to "order from the publisher." In the rush of Christmas selling and buying, however, the seller has not time to do this nor the buyer time to wait, the consequence being that the customer does not buy, or falls back on one of the "drives" of the year. At an uptown bookseller's, who has failed more than once, we learn of books nominally priced at $1 being sold as low as 25 cents, and in other cases the drygoods houses offer books at a lower price than the regular trade buy them at wholesale. The key to the situation, we again submit, is in making the prices real instead of nominal, so that this enormous seeming discrepancy shall no longer be advertised to the detriment of the regular trade. Combinations and coercions fail to reach the evil. because all such shifts out the public on the wrong side. It would be a good thing for the trade if the new year of 1800 could see a return to better methods which should give the undersellers less of a chance than that of which they have been making the most during the last few years.

In further evidence of the liberality of the pubishing fraternity alluded to in our last issue, we learn that several publishing houses of Boston have sent in the compliments of the season to the Boston Press Club, accompanied by valuable lists of standard books and some of the latest works. From Estes & Lauriat were received a handsome set of Dickens' works; Lee & Shepard sent seventeen miscellaneous volumes, and Houghton, Mifflin & Company a fine set of Thack-

THE HOSPITAL SATURDAY AND SUNDAY ASSO-CIATION of New York City again appeals to the charity of the various trades, and, we trust, not in vain. Every one is now well acquainted with the noble work this Association is engaged in, and we will therefore content ourselves with this reminder. Contributions will be received by Mr. Henry B., Barnes, 111 William St., Treasurer of the Auxiliary for the Book and Publishing Trade of the Association, or may be sent directly to the Association office at 79 Fourth Avenue, N. Y.

THE Senate Committee on Patents will have a hearing on the subject of International Copyright on January 9.

NOTES ON ENGLISH PUBLISHERS.

G. W. Smalley in the Tribune.

Some of the leading publishers are turning themselves into companies; Messrs. Routledge, for example; though the partners keep all the shares, amounting to a million of dollars, in their own hands; leaving the public to subscribe, if they like, for something less than half that sum in debentures. Messrs. Kegan Paul & Co., Messrs. Trübner & Co., and Messrs. George Redway & Co. propose to amalgamate into one limited liability company, with a joint share capital of half a million dollars, and half as much debenture capital. It may be hoped that these examples are not going to be generally followed. The author and the public have had a pretty hard time of it in their dealings with the publisher in his human and individual form. If he is to cease to be human and become a corporation, which by virtue of its corporate quality is soutless, Heaven help the author.

Or, if not Heaven, let Providence, in the shape of the Incorporated Society of Authors, help That Society has already done something to mitigate his miseries; something, but perhaps not very much. Mr. Besant, who is chairman of its Executive Committee, says that "up to the present moment the Society has confined itself to urging upon authors to take as much care of literary as of any other property, and to recommending certain common precautions—such as the auditing of accounts, etc." When Mr. Besant says "common" precautions, he really meass uncommon. It is because authors have not succeeded-often, no doubt, have not tried to-in getting sight of publishers' accounts, audited or unaudited, that the profits in books have been divided in such singular proportions. The name of the author who has been bold enough to ask not only that full accounts should be rendered. but that they should be submitted to the examination of an independent auditor, has not yet been disclosed to an expectant but still incredulous

Otherwise, too, than in matters of mere money are the ways of some publishers—English publishers—past finding out, or, when found out, difficult to make straight. Mr. Gilbert's recent unpleasantness with Messrs. Boosey & Co. is an instance in point. Long years ago Mr. Gilbert, then litte known, translated and adapted for this firm, which issues music and musical books, Offenbach's opera, "Les Brigands." His version was lately put upon the stage, but in an altered and interpolated form. As they retained Mr. Gilbert's name, he protested, and as protests availed not, he went to law, which also availed not. He asked for an injunction to restrain Messrs. Boosey from inserting in a "book," which bore Mr. Gilbert's name on the title-page, certain songs and dialogues which were not his, but invented by an ex-music-hall singer. injunction was refused. Mr. Gilbert appealed, and it was refused again. "In common honesty," he pathetically but vainly pleads, " I think I am entitled to ask that I shall not be made to shine with the lustre of another man's intellect." And he then states his case against the Court of Appeal in a manner at once so Gilbertain and so conclusive that it is a pity to abridge it, and I quote the text:

"If a grocer buys a tin of Colman's mustard. and having adulterated it with a mustard that is not Colman's, nevertheless sells it across the counter as Colmans, the Majesty of the Law is outraged, and the thunderbolts of the Courts of Chancery are not invoked in vain. This is a situation which the Courts of Chancery can graspit appeals to them as a mercantile outrage concerning which there can be no two opinions. The Courts of Chancery have invariably shown themselves hopelessly unable to apply this simple principle to works written for the stage.

Mr. Gilbert's publishers have nothing better to urge in reply than that they offered to say on the play-bill or title-page, or both, that the text was not entirely from Mr. Gilbert's pen. Everybody can form his own opinion as to the adequacy of that defence. But the publishers have the law on their side; what more could they ask? Public opinion is not a matter about which they show themselves over-anxious.

THE RUSKIN BIBLIOGRAPHY.

JOHN WILEY & SONS have just issued the first two issues of "A Bibliography of the Writings in Prose and Verse of John Ruskin, LL.D.," edited by Thomas J. Wise. The work is to be issued in four parts, divided into twelve divisions as follows: Pt. I. Editiones, principes, etc.— Division A. Lesser works (that is volumes of lesser bulk not minor importance) arranged in chronological order; B, Bibliography of "Modern Painters;" C, Bibliography of "The Stones of Venice;" D, Works edited or prefaced by Ruskin; E, Summary of Collected Works. Pt. II. First appearances of separate pieces, being Ruskin's contributions to periodical literature, etc.—A, Poems; B, Letters to the press; C, Essays, reviews, magazine articles, etc.; D, Selections. Pt. III. Ruskiniana.—A, Complete volumes of biography and criticism; B, Reviews, criticisms, and other minor Ruskiniana; C, Published portraits of Ruskin. Pt. IV. American reprints and "pirated editions."—There will also be an Appendix consisting of list of lectures, particulars of the Ruskin Societies, chronological synopsis, and details of any work which may be issued during the passage of the Bibliography through the press, and a General Index.

The editor thus far gives most minute information concerning the publication of the various first editions—how bound, the original publisher's price, whether still in print, the difference between successive editions of the same book, and brief historical notes when necessary. When completed it will no doubt be the most complete as it certainly will be the most important contribution to the subject ever undertaken or published. The work is gotten up in sumptuous shape with extra large margin, the page measuring 9% x 12 inches, the type page 3% x 6% inches.

OBITUARY NOTES.

WILLIAM L. BERRY, for twenty-five years a leading bookseller in Detroit, Mich., died at his residence on Lincoln Avenue, December 21, after an illness of forty-eight hours, of pneumonia. Mr. Berry has lived in Detroit for a quarter of a century. He was for many years connected with W. E. Tunis and Tunis & Parker, and during the last six years with John MacFarlane. He was universally loved and respected, not only in the trade, but by all who had the pleasure and privilege of knowing him. His genial manner to all, and his strong personality impressed itself upon all with whom he came in contact. Mr. Berry leaves a widow who has the sympathy of a large circle of friends in her sudden bereavement.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

MESSRS. ERCKMANN and Chatrian have kissed, made up their little difficulties, and become literary Siamese twins once more.

THE English verse-writer known as "E. Nesbit" turns out to be Mrs. Edith Bland, the wife of Hubert Bland, an ardent Socialist, who lives at Lee, one of London's suburbs.

OLIVER L. BARBOUR, the famous compiler of law reports, died on the 18th at Saratoga, after a long illness. He was born in Cambridge, Washington Co., N. Y., in June, 1811.

AUNT MARY TYLER, as she was generally known, died last week at her residence in Somerville, Mass. Her maiden name was Mary F. Sawyer, and she was the original Mary who "had a little lamb."

A BOHEMIAN named Franz Hedrich turns up at this late day with a claim that he wrote all the charming poems and novels of the late Alfred Meissner. It is improbable that there is anything in this claim.

WE regret to hear that Mr. Homer Greene of Honesville, Pa., author of "The Blind Brother," etc., lost the Ms. of a novel entitled "An Honest Lawyer" in the fire that consumed T. Y. Crowell & Co.'s establishment in Boston last month. Unfortunately the author has kept no copy, and it will take him several months to rewrite the story from the mere skeleton of it which he preserved. Mr. N. Haskell Dole, the firm's literary adviser, also lost considerable portions of two of his own MSS, which were in his desk.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

Mr. John H. Black and wife sailed Saturday, December 28, via the Servia for an extended pleasure trip.

THE Fifth Annual Banquet of the Brotherhood of Commercial Travellers will be held at the Hotel Marlborough, Broadway and 36th St., on the evening of the 30th inst., at 8 P.M.

The new Cameo Edition of Ik Marvel's "Dream Life" and "Reveries of a Bachelor" has sold so well that a second edition of 3000 sets has been printed. And still there are some who say it doesn't pay to make good books.

FIRE broke out in the Everett Building, corner of Ann and Nassau Streets, New York City, on the evening of the 27th, and did considerable damage to the stock of books in Thomas E. Keane's store. Joseph Sabin, who has an office in the building, also had his stock of books, etc., damaged by water.

C. KLACKNER, 5 E. 17th St., N. Y., in connection with a wood-engraving by Miss C. A. Powell of John La Farge's masterpiece, "The Resurrection," in St. Thomas' Church, N. Y., has issued a neat little explanatory pamphlet on the subject. The engraving itself is a masterful specimen of wood-cutting, 10 x 12 inches, limited to an edition of 150 copies.

ONE of the heaviest failures of the year that the paper trade has experienced is that of the old firm of J. Q. Preble & Co., manufacturers of blank books and stationery, to and 12 Thomas St., New York. The embarrassment of this concern involves a number of firms all over the country and it will probably be a week or two before the exact state of affairs will be given to the public.

"MR. BRYCE'S 'American Commonwealth' is out of print in England," writes Mr. Smalley to the N. Y. Tribuse. "The first edition in its three octavo volumes was of 1500 copies, and is destined to become moderately scarce, for it is not likely to be reprinted in its complete form. Messrs. Macmillan are just bringing out a new and cheaper edition in two volumes, with the dangerous chapter by Mr. Goodnow omitted, or, at least, not fully reprinted. Mr. Oakey Hall has chosen to bring his action for libel against Mr. Bryce and not against the publishers, but no firm would wish to reprint an alleged libel while an action was pending; nor would Mr. Bryce himself care to.

HENRY FROWDE of the Oxford University Press has this year produced a most remarkable novelty in "The Finger Prayer-Book," the name being derived from its diminutive proportions. It is I inch broad, 3½ inches long, and ½ of an inch in thickness. Into this incredibly small space is compressed the entire unabridged prayer-book, including calendar and occasional services. The excellent qualities of the Oxford India paper make the brilliantly printed diamond type a triumph of typographic skill. The binding is al-most a greater feat. To fold evenly such tiny pages, to sew and finish these perfectly bound little books must have needed an almost fairylike delicacy of touch. This little gem is issued in a variety of bindings, morocco, russia, calf, velvet, etc., all finished with the perfection of Oxford books.

Mr. Thomas G. Shrarman, of Brooklyn, N.Y.. desiring to encourage the efforts of College and University students, and others, in economic studies, has offered through the American Economic Association, Baltimore, Md., the sum of two hundred and fifty dollars for the best essay on the subject of State and Local Taxation of Personal Property in the United States. Competitors will be expected to discuss the following points: Should personal property be taxed at all? Should some kinds of personal property be taxed and other kinds exempted from taxation? The relation of personal property taxes, if any exist, to other taxes in a rational system of taxation, The changes in our laws needed to establish a better system of taxation. The essay must not exceed 25,000 words, and must be in the hands of the Secretary of the Association not later than December 1, 1800. Each paper must be typewritten, signed by a fictitious name, and accompanied by a sealed envelope containing the name assumed as well as the address of the author. The Association has thus far offered prizes for essays on the subjects of Immigration, Child Labor, and Women Wage-Earners; and in view of past experience it is believed that the establishment of this prize on Taxation will prove beneficial also. It is not meant to confine the competition to college and university students.

At the regular meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association the following resolutions of condolence with J. F. Vogelius, on the death of his wife, were adopted:

WHEREAS, We, the members of the Board of Trustees of the Booksellers' and Stationers' Provident Association of the United States, have heard with regret of the death of the wife of our fellow-member, Joseph F. Vogelius, be it therefore it therefore

Resolved. That we tender to our friend and brother, in this sad hour of trial and bereavement, our deep and loyal symyathy—the sympathy of hearts that know the warmth, the generosity and tenderness of his, and have felt its benign influence.

Resolved. That while we join with him in the unutterable sorrow of a loss which deprives our friend of the joy and solace of wifely companionship and ministrations, we bid him be comforted by the divine promise of the soul's immortality, through which he may feel the inspiring certainty that beyond the veil of tears and mystery, on the limitless and radiant shores of eternal life, the fond wife, with undiminished affection, is warting to welcome her beloved one to the kingdom of pure, unalloyed joy, and union without end.

The Following are Some of the Opinions of the Trade and Press:

"For the time that we have devoted to its examination, are well pleased with it."—ROBERT CLARKE & Co., Publishers and Booksellers, Cincinnati.

"You deserve well of the world till you die, and after, but the book trade is just as ungrateful as any republic, and although they may sling an occasional laurel wreath out your way, the silver buzzard and the golden eagle 'fileth not so fast nor so far.' There is but one Directory of the Book and Stationery Trade and that is Caspar's."—P. F. VAN EVEREN, New York.

"It is just splendid. The most complete book of the kind we have seen."-J. H. Kurzenknabe & Sons, Harisburg, Pa.

"I am greatly pleased with your Directory. It is the best work of the kind ever issued and deserves a large sale."—NATURAL SCIENCE PUBLISHING Co., New York.

"It seems more complete than anything of the kind I have seen before."—J. B. MARTINDALE, Chicago.

"We like it very much, and we don't know but what it is the best thing of the kind we have ever seen."—P. R. McCargo & Co., Boston.

"Am very grateful to you for the conscientious care and painstaking effort in preparing so valuable and so complete a work. Be kind enough to enter my name, and mail me all addenda sheets in future, and do not fail to notify me of any new project in this line you may engage in."—Gro. H. Colsy, Bookseller, Lancaster, N. H.

"We have looked it over with great interest and approciate the fact that it will be of great value to us "-V.
O. Davis & Co., Booksellers, Cincinnati.

"I think your book a most valuable one and believe will be better appreciated as it becomes better known."—WILL H. LYONS, Newport, Ky.

"Even a cursory examination of this important directory will convince any one of the thorough manner in which it has been put together and of the value of the completed work. Mr. Caspar has produced a work which if properly kept up from year to year, will be the standard."—The American Stationer, New York City.

"The Appendix to Caspar's Directory of the American Book, News, and Stationery Trades is a most valuable compilation, exhaustive and complete. The information it contains is absolutely unique and not to be procured from any other source. Hence it is of the first importance to every one in the trades. It is admirally arranged; the references are simple, and being groupd under special heads, makes consultation a manter of killed to the control of the palse of the whole book, from which the initiated can feel the palse of the whole book-publishing world. The Book of the Season.

GREAT SENATORS OF THE UNITED STATES Forty Years Ago (1848 and 1840). with Personal Recollections and Delineations of Calhoun, Benton, Clay, Webster, General Houston, Jefferson Davis, etc. By OLIVER Robert Bonner's Sons. Publishers. $1.00.

"Great Senators" is emphatically the book of the season. The critics and reviewers give it unstitted praise. The New York Tribuse concludes a two-column seriem of it thus.

"This book will be read with the keenest pleasure by all who are old enough to have been brought up in the all who are old enough to have been brought up in the traditions of half a century ago, while it can be com-mended to young men as a treasure-house of information concerning perhaps the most striking and able group of statesmen the Union has known."

The New York Times savs :

"Mr. Dyer's relation with the great Senators of forty years ago was one very fortunate for the acquiring of fresh impressions. It is impossible to read his reminis-cences without being aware that the impressions he reports are genuine.

The New York Sum says:

"Among the recent contributions to American history none is worthy of more serious attention than a volume entitled 'Great Senators,' by Oliver Dyer.
"It would be easy to fill columns with effective extracts from this volume, but we must confine ourselves to two or three examples of inclaive and impartial delineation. Mr. Dyer's analysis of Webster's individuality is the most searching that we have seen-indeed it is the only one which accounts at once for the triumphs and the shortcomings of the great parliamentary champion of the Union."

The New York Press says:

"In the book, 'Great Senators of the United States Forty Years Ago,' are told, as Dyer only could tell, stories of Calboun, Benton, Clay, Webster, Houston, and Jeff Davis, with personal recollections and delineations. The personal descriptions given by Dyer of these great men are photographic in precision and lifelike as touched up by the anecdotal stroke of a master."

"Great Senators" is supplied to the trade by Robert Bonner's Sons. Any one who does not find "Great Senators" at the bookstores can obtain a copy, postage paid, by sending a dollar to
